CROWD MAKES SMITH GIVE OPENING TALK PRIOR TO SCHEDULE

Governor Kidnaped From Auto And Forced To Speak

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Governor Al Smith was resting at his hotel here today after one of the most grueling experiences of his long political career.

Returning late last night from a week-end in New Jersey, the Democratic presidential candidate was literally dragged from his automobile by a crowd of 10,000 cheering men and women in Newark pushed halfway to the City Hall steps and then virtually forced to make the first public speech of his campaign.

After half a dozen of New Jersey's stalwart state troopers aided by a score of city policemen had fought a losing battle with the crowd which swooped down on Smith's machine, the candidate was lifted out of the car, and, before he knew it, was on the city hall steps in the midst of a crowd of men and women who were screaming:

"Al Smith, our next president."

The governor hadn't planned to open his active campaign for the White House until sometime after Labor Day but his Newark admirers took things in their own hands and there was nothing else he could do.

Smith's speech on the steps of the Newark city hall was not long, but it was a campaign speech just the same.

"HOME IS CASTLE" ATTORNEY RULES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—A man's home is his castle, at least in so far as being safe from search without a warrant by prohibition agents.

Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt, assistant attorney general, made this statement today in connection with reports that J. H. S. Gifford, assistant federal attorney in Minneapolis, had said the prohibition law recognized no difference between a man's home and his place of business.

There is a distinction, she said. "Under section 25 of the prohibition act, no search warrant can be issued for a private dwelling unless an affidavit has been made that liquor is being sold there," she explained. "After the affidavit is passed upon by a judicial officer, and if a warrant is issued, then only can the dwelling be searched."

She made it quite plain the department would not tolerate any invasion of the rights of citizens in their homes.

COPENHAGEN, DENMARK, Aug. 28.—Daughard Jensen, governor for the department of Southern Greenland, who is sailing for Greenland today to direct the search for Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer, missing American aviators, is confident that they will be found.

FLAG PRESENTED TO SCOUTS BY D. OF A.; 5,000 SEE PROGRAM

Drill Is Feature; Dancing Attracts Young Folks

Fully 5,000 people are estimated to have gathered at Shawnee Park Monday night to witness the flag presentation ceremony of the Daughters of America, No. 160, Daughters of America, to Greene County Boy Scouts, held in the newly-completed auditorium.

The pavilion was filled to capacity and thousands more, unable to gain entrance, were prevented from hearing the speeches although able to witness the exercises.

The program opened immediately after the grand parade disbanded with an address by Mrs. Carrie D. Faulkner, national councillor, Daughters of America, followed by music by the Daughters of America Band, a women's musical organization from Dayton.

A brief address by Mrs. Myrtle Wood, state councillor, D. of A., preceded the actual presentation of a beautiful flag to Greene County Boy Scouts by Mrs. Minnie Pillsbury.

The acceptance speech was made by Ralph Baldwin, a Boy Scout.

Following the selection, the "Star Spangled Banner," by the D. of A. Band, closing prayer was offered by the Rev. James P. Lytle.

Immediately after the program, the auditorium was cleared for a drill by the I. O. O. F. Lodge of Dayton. The precision with which the drill maneuvers were presented drew much applause.

After the drill, dancing was enjoyed in the auditorium, park, until 12 o'clock with music furnished by Clarence Jeffries and his Xenia orchestra.

DOUBLE SLAYER IS CAUGHT BY POLICE

LOGAN, W. Va., Aug. 28.—Dan Thomas, negro, was in jail here today following his capture here yesterday by state police who had been searching for him in connection with a gun fight in a dance hall at Yoyn which resulted fatally for one of the principals and caused the death of an innocent bystander.

Thomas admitted entering the dance hall with the intention of shooting J. L. Browning because of a wrangle they had had over Browning's attentions to Thomas' girl friend, according to police.

Immediately upon Thomas' appearance at the dance hall he and Browning began shooting, witnesses said. Clifford Wright, negro, proprietor of the dance hall was struck by a stray bullet and died shortly after the shooting as did Browning who also received mortal wounds.

In the general melee, William Clark received wounds in the arms and leg but it is believed he will recover.

M'CHESNEY SPEAKS ON HERITAGE GIVEN XENIA BY PIONEERS

Urges Principles Of Forefathers Be Maintained

Discussing the subject "Our Heritage," Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of Cedarville College, urged the maintenance of the three fundamental principles of our pioneer forefathers brought with them to this country—justice, equality and liberty—in an address featuring the Home-Coming exercises at Shawnee Park auditorium Monday afternoon.

Dr. McChesney carried the audience back in memory to the early days when Indians inhabited this territory; how when the white man came the Indians believed they owned this ground and how they contested with the intruders, eventually being pushed westward.

"This memory is sacred to the soil on which we stand today. The Indian has left us a material heritage."

"We are living in a new day," declared the speaker. "Progress is being made along all lines—moral, mental, physical and spiritual. Many people are afraid of the outcome, but I have no quarrel with modern youth as long as the sturdy principles of our forefathers are maintained. I am not here to criticize the young people for their free ways. I care for nothing else providing they get

SLAYS SON IN FAMILY FUSS

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Arthur F. Falk, Northwest Park commissioner, shot and killed his son, Eldred, 22, in a quarrel at the Falk home here early today.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Olga Falk, and his sister, Bernice, 19, witnessed the tragedy.

The senior Falk went to the telephone and called police.

"May God have mercy on me. I have just killed my son. Please hurry over here," he said.

Police found all three members of the family too hysterical to give coherent account of what happened.

Between sobs, the father said his son came home about 1 a. m. and admitted that he had been drinking. A quarrel arose and the son threatened to leave the house.

CHARGE PROFESSOR WITH BLASPHEMY

BOSTON, Aug. 28.—Issuance of a warrant charging blasphemy for the arrest of Dr. Horace Meyer Kallen, former professor of philosophy at Harvard University, literary executor of the late William James member of the American Philosophical Society, and professor of philosophy of the new school for social research in New York City, today created excitement up Beacon Hill and beneath the elms in Cambridge. Police say Dr. Kallen publicly called Jesus Christ an anarchist.

The alleged blasphemous statement, according to information at police headquarters, is alleged to have been made by Dr. Kallen at the Sacco-Vanzetti rally in scenic auditorium Thursday night. Officers who attended the meeting in plain clothes in their report quote Dr. Kallen as saying: "If Sacco and Vanzetti were anarchists, so was Jesus Christ an anarchist."

FIND THREE BODIES AS WATERS RECEDE; SEARCH CONTINUES

New York Floods Cause $1,000,000 Worth Of Damage

ELLENVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 28.—With property damage as the result of the cloudburst in the Roundout Valley exceeding $1,000,000 state and local police today are attempting to check definitely the number of lives lost in the flood waters.

Three bodies have been recovered, but it is feared that the death list may be increased. The waters in the sixteen-mile stretch of Roundout Valley have receded and residents are returning to their water-soaked homes. Many homeless are being cared for by neighbors.

The raging torrent of Roundout Creek washed out thirty bridges, it is estimated, and telephone and telegraph wires in the vicinity are down and water systems paralyzed. A section of the Western railroad tracks were washed out at Wawarsing and paved highways throughout Ulster and Sullivan Counties, the scene of the cloudburst, were badly damaged. Along the roads many automobiles were found deserted by their occupants who had sought safety on higher ground from the rapidly rising waters.

The three known dead are Charles Lavery, 59, of Paterson, N. J., Philip Blatt of New York, and Frank Weller of Grahamsville. Residents here received first warning of the danger about 2 p. m. Sunday when local police were notified that the waters of Roundout Creek were rising rapidly. Rain fell incessantly and by 5 p. m. Napanoch was engulfed.

DANCING IS WAY TO REDUCE

Snappy Steps Will Take Off Fat; "Pickin' Cotton" Is Newest Hop.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Dancing to reduce is the latest American fad. It's more fun than the daily dozen, more comfortable than rubber garments and just as pleasant as bath salts.

And that's why the new ballroom dance for the 1928-29 season, succeeding the "Black Bottom" and the "Varsity Drag," will be a snappy, virile concoction guaranteed to take the fat off in chunks while at the same time appealing to the aesthetic sense.

This information was gleaned today at the fiftieth annual convention of the American Society of Teachers of Dancing. From all over the country the dancing teachers are here trying out new ballroom steps with the idea of evolving a new dance rhythm something like the typical American and, if possible, free from the African and other exotic influences of present-day dance music.

"Pickin' Cotton" is a new dance that's coming in for a lot of attention. It's the latest on Broadway, and the dancing masters were giving it a try-out this morning. You shuffle a bit, glide, lift your

GOVERNOR SORLIE OF NORTH DAKOTA DIES IN BISMARCK

BISMARCK, N. D., Aug. 28.—Governor A. G. Sorlie of North Dakota died from a heart attack at his home here early today.

The governor, who was fifty-four years old, had been suffering from heart disease for several years. His condition became so bad recently that he was forced to remain at home and last Friday night a brother and sister living in Minnesota were summoned here.

Governor Sorlie was born near

Alberta, Minn., April 26, 1874, and received his education in a country school and at the Alberta Lea Academy. He first came to North Dakota in 1894 and for three years worked in a bank. Later he operated a general store and then became a traveling salesman. In 1903 he became interested in a cracker factory at Grand Forks which he sold in 1907 to establish the grain and feed business which provided the basis for his fortune.

Guernsey cow show, William Rehner and Joe Lehman, Canal Winchester, received second and third awards.

Margery Dare, owned by Alex Robinson, Urbichville, won first prize in the three-gaited stallion, mare or gelding, 14.2 and not over 15 hands high, class in the opening night's horse show. Another of Robinson's horses also took first prize—Dimity Gay, in the five gaited novice class. The award in this case was a loving cup given by the Beniah Park Jockey Club, of Columbus.

Other winners were: five gaited gelding class, Land of Longview owned by U. Kuhns, Greensburg, Pa.; ponies, other than Shetlands, 12.1 to 14.2 hands high, Surprise owned by S. M. Ross, Columbus.

Three gaited, combination for stallion, mare or gelding, the Goller owned by Minton Stables, Barboursville, Ky.; road hack, Bedford owned by James Marker, Columbus; Hunters, heavy, Linerick owned by Charles I. Fisher, Detroit.

One of the interesting sidelights reported yesterday was the "cooling" of John Philip Sousa and his band members outside the gates of the fair grounds, because they were without tickets or proper credentials and unrecognized by hardboiled gatekeepers.

When asked for his pass, Sousa is reported to have answered, "My face is usually my pass," but it didn't register with the gate keepers, and the famous band master and composer was forced to wait until Ralph Combs, state fair press agent, arrived and made introductions.

MINE BOMBING IS OBJECT OF PROBE

NELSONVILLE, O., Aug. 28.—With two suspects under arrest, Sheriff Lloyd of Hocking County today was conducting a searching probe seeking to fix responsibility on the perpetrators of the bombing of the entrance to the Nelsonville Murray Mine here last night in which seven non-union miners narrowly escaped death.

Six weeks of operation with seventy-five non-union men in the workings was terminated by the explosion. Twenty-two mines are in operation in the field with non-

ARRESTS PROMISED SOON BY DETECTIVE DIRECTING PROBE

Councilman Made Target Of Gunmen Continues Probe

AKRON, Ohio, Aug. 28.—Spurred by an aroused public sentiment, authorities here were putting forth every effort today to run down the thugs who have made two attempts to assassinate Councilman Kyle Ross since he was appointed recently as a special investigator of vice and crime conditions in the city.

"I'll stay on this job personally until we get the man we are after, even if it takes a year," Detective Chief Ed. McDonnell declared after working thirty-six hours, without sleep, during which he questioned many underworld characters. Arrests will probably come soon, however, McDonnell said, since "underworld leaders themselves, realizing they have made a mistake by resorting to violence, are disposed to make somebody the goat and get this thing quieted down."

Ross declares his investigation will continue.

"The cowardly acts of my enemies prove more conclusively than all the evidence my undercover workers have collected that Akron is in danger of becoming a second Chicago," he stated.

The first attempt on the life of Councilman Ross was made last Friday night by intruders who entered his home during his absence, opened the gas jets and cut off the electricity. Ross, returning home, was unaware that the house was full of gas and was about to strike a match, when the electric lights failed to turn on, when he ignited the match an explosion would probably have resulted.

Sunday night, gunmen entered the house and set fire to the basement. Ross, awakened by his wife, pursued the prowlers and exchanged shots with them from his back porch. A neighbor, Ed. Hardesty, also fired several shots from a rifle at the shadowy figures from a bedroom window.

A local newspaper has offered a reward of $1,000 for the capture and conviction of the would-be assassins and the city council is expected to also post a reward.

STILLMAN PLANE IN LOS ANGELES RACE

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Mrs. Anne U. Stillman today entered her Wright motorized Bellanca monoplane "North Star" in the New York-Los Angeles non-stop race, scheduled to start Sept. 12.

CARRIES BATTLE TO FOE BY CHALLENGING PARTY FARM RECORD

Nominee Points Out His Own Efforts For Farmers

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Senator Charles Curtis, Republican candidate for vice president, in a speech at the state fair grounds here today fired the opening gun in the G. O. P. campaign to capture New York state, Governor Al Smith's own bailiwick, by contrasting the Republican record on farm relief legislation with that of the Democrats and pointing out what he, personally, did in behalf of the agriculturists of the country.

The vice-presidential nominee told the assembled farmers that when the federal farm loan board was able to meet the demands upon it for loans he introduced a bill authorizing the government to purchase $50,000,000 of the bonds which enabled it to resume loaning on farm property. The bill was passed and signed by President Harding.

Senator Curtis said that as a result of this legislation he received a letter from A. F. Lever, a Democratic member of the board, who wrote that he could "hardly conceive of anything that you (Curtis) might have done which is going to have such a far-reaching and lasting beneficial effect upon the agricultural situation now afoot in the future."

Describing the plight of the farmer, Senator Curtis said that soon after the war congress realized that no class on America's population had suffered more by readjustment of prices from the high points attained during the war than the farmers.

"When President Harding came into office on March 4, 1921, Curtis said "he and members of the cabinet and Republican members of congress realized that early action on legislation to relieve the farmer should be had, so the emergency tariff act was passed and signed."

In the senate only seven Democrats voted to increase the duty on wheat from thirty to forty cents per bushel. While thirty-one Republicans voted for the increase only two Democrats voted against it and twenty-six Democrats voted against it. Only nine Democrats voted for the final passage of the emergency tariff act and thirty-four Republicans voted for it. Twenty-six Democrats and four Republicans voted against it.

Senator Curtis said the emergency tariff act was of great help to the farmers and stockmen. He pointed out, too, that soon after President Harding was inaugurated a law was enacted authorizing the War Finance Corporation to extend further credits to aid in carrying and disposing of agricultural products so as to provide credit for agricultural purposes. He also detailed a number of other pieces of legislation that were enacted for the benefit of the farmer at a time when the plight of the agriculturist was acute.

BELIEVE FIVE LOST FROM TUG

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Thrown into the waters of the East River when the tug boat Volunteer was dashed to bits and sunk in a collision with the Fall River liner Chester W. Chapin today, four crew men were missing, and believed drowned.

Eleven of their shipmates were rescued by the tugboat Hapgood, and landed at the foot of One Hundred and Thirty Eighth Street.

The liner, carrying 150 passengers from Providence, R. I., careened wildly out of her course and ran into the rocks of the treacherous channel. She was stuck firmly aground for two hours until the tugboat came to her aid again, and she made her way to Pier 14, North River at the foot of Vesey Street.

THOUSANDS ARRIVE TO ENJOY GREENE COUNTY DAY TUESDAY

Tuesday, the third day of the Home-Coming, is being celebrated as Greene County Day.

Tuesday morning was set aside for sight-seeing trips over the city and in viewing the various exhibits, including the railroad exhibitions, the flower show and the historical display at Central High School.

The grand auto parade, participated in by farmers, merchants, business men and manufacturers of Greene County, was scheduled for 1:30 o'clock through the downtown streets, disbanding at Shawnee Park, where R. W. Dunlap, assistant U. S. Secretary of agriculture, was scheduled to make the principal address at a program beginning at 2 o'clock in the park. O. E. Bradute, Xenia, former president of the American and Ohio Farm Bureau Federations, who will be host to Mr. Dunlap during his Home-Coming visit here was to preside as chairman. Band music was also a scheduled feature.

At 4 o'clock a reception will be held honoring United States Senator S. D. Fess, Yellow Springs with the reception committee in charge.

Between 4:30 and 5:30 planes from Wright Field will stage a daylight "aerial parade" over the city. Twelve planes instead of six, as originally thought, will participate in the air exposition Tuesday and again Wednesday at the same hour.

In the evening, Tuesday, the feature will be the ox-roast and carnival at Cox Memorial Athletic Field. This will last from 5:30 to 9:30 after which dancing will be enjoyed in the park auditorium until 12 o'clock.

The fourth and closing day of the celebration, Wednesday, will be observed as "Patriotic Day."

With the morning hours devoted to visiting sites of interest and touring the city in autos which may be obtained at Home-Coming headquarters, the military parade will open the program at 1:30 p. m.

All military and allied organizations are invited to join in the march over downtown streets to the south entrance of the Court House, where a flag and flag pole, newly-erected, gift of the American Legion to Greene County, will be formally dedicated with an appropriate ceremony.

Following the program, the parade will re-form and march to Shawnee auditorium, where another aerial circus will be witnessed. The Legion will serve an old army style supper between 6 and 7 p. m.

The final assembly will be held at 7 p. m. when William Macracken, assistant secretary of commerce, in charge of aviation, will make the main address. Gen. Benson W. Hough, Columbus, will be chairman. Dancing will be held later in the auditorium.

HUGE PENNSY LOCOMOTIVE IN CONTRAST WITH EARLY ENGINE

That Leviathan of the rails, the modern passenger locomotive.

See it on the Springfield branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad opposite the plant of the Greene County Lumber Company. Note its greatness. Its size, its power, its clocklike action, that is almost like human intelligence.

Then make another trip. See the puny infant, its pioneer ancestor, on the Baltimore and Ohio tracks.

These two pieces of mechanism represent nearly 100 years of man's motive progress, between 1832 and 1928.

Ninety-six years have seen the baby grow into a monster. But the baby in its time undoubtedly was the source of more awe, more interest, than the monster of today.

Visit the Pennsylvania Railroad exhibit, and let John E. Daly, former assistant trainmaster on the Cincinnati division and experienced engineer explain the workings of the monster to you. It may be a little hard for the lay mind to grasp.

But man, beside this product of his genius, seems even more puny than the baby thing he first taught to run by the power of steam. He seems to have put some of his soul, as well as a great deal of his intellect into the Titan that he now calls the K-4-S.

This latest type of the passenger locomotive was built in 1927. It weighs 208,890 pounds. The wheel base of engine and tender is seventy-five feet and four inches. It has a steam pressure of 205 pounds to the square inch. Its tractive power is 44,460 pounds. Its fire box is twelve feet long and seven feet wide, and into this maw the fireman can shovel tons of coal.

Eighteen tons of coal and 12,150 gallons of water are carried in its tank, the water stored in its own compartment behind and below the coal.

But the most wonderful thing about this monster is the automatic train control which was first put into use in July, 1926.

The engineer sits on his leather seat beside the control. Ahead of him is line with his vision, is

Mr. and Mrs. John Stewart, Swisher Road, are entertaining as their "Home-Coming" guests, Mr. Martin Coffey, Miss Sarah Sell, and the Misses Betty and Mary Catherine Coffey, Cincinnati, former residents of this city, having just returned from an extended trip through the east for this occasion.

The motive power of the vast engines of this type is almost unlimited. They have been run as high as ninety-seven miles an hour on the main line between Xenia and Columbus. All tracks to accommodate the K-4-S have been equipped with steel rails weighing 130 pounds a yard. The old rails weighed 110 pounds.

The big locomotives run through Xenia carrying the New York to St. Louis and the New York to Cincinnati trains.

By way of comparison, the Pennsylvania has on exhibit the type of passenger engine known as D-16 built in 1903, and still in service on branch lines.

This engine, which was considered a Titan in its day, weighs 141,100 pounds, has a tractive force of 23,902 pounds, wheel base of a little over fifty-five feet and carries 5000 gallons of water and eight tons of coal. The old and reverse lever is used to control the engine while the compressed air control is used on the newer type.

Ability of engineers to take water on the run is also a feature of the new type of engine. This is performed by means of a lever operated scoop under the tank, which can be lowered into the mile long shallow tanks placed at intervals between the rails.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

LASTING BEAUTY—Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain: but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised. Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates.—Prov. 31:30 and 31.

"ABOLITION OF POVERTY"

"No modern economist has better stated our problems of national progress than has Herbert Hoover," states C. W. Barron, of the Boston News Bureau and other Barron publications.

This dean of financial writers thinks Hoover is right when he declares, "Our purpose is to build in this nation a human society, not an economic system."

"And the abolition of poverty is most directly promoted as he so clearly points out, by the upbuilding of the family rather than the upbuilding of the factory."

"The old world and its political systems have denied equal opportunity to man. Man has been permitted to feel oppression from class distinction, from aggregated wealth and from heredity. We have been struggling as a race for the freedom of man. Under Mr. Hoover that struggle must go on—a struggle for freedom and opportunity. His opportunity, and his right to labor to abolish all his forms of poverty, must be sacredly guarded."

"The leadership that Mr. Hoover would give us in this respect must be followed in state, city and village, and one of the measures promoting man's opportunity to labor and conserve himself and the community against the waste of idle hours is to regulate public improvements so as to tide over periods of slackness in labor demand."

"What, in a word, does Mr. Hoover mean by the abolition of poverty?"

"He means the right to labor—opportunity for the individual not the abolition of labor, which is perhaps God's greatest gift to man," said Mr. Barron.

VALUE OF NATIONAL PARKS

Last year 2,354,643 people visited the national parks of the United States. Yosemite park drew the most of all, with over 490,000 visitors.

The government did a wonderful thing for the country at no great cost, when it provided this system of 19 parks, in which people can enjoy the wonders of nature and find inexpensive ways of spending a vacation. The many thousands of people who camp out in these parks have probably saved many times as much money as the upkeep of the parks cost.

One result has been to cultivate a love for nature and simple living, and people who have roughed it in these parks have come home more self-reliant and resourceful. Now what is needed is to see this system extended to spots of beauty and grandeur all over the country.

What many towns need is not so much new industries coming in, as more home town loyalty to keep the old money from going out.

While the young crowd are trying to look older, the older folks are trying to appear younger.

It has been suggested that political candidates be subjected to mental tests. Why not voters?

Not much use to go in for a white collar job, unless you can earn enough to keep that collar clean.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

MANNERISMS

Probably you do several little things every day that annoy your wife. You have a mannerism you are unconscious of, but it is exceedingly irritating after having been repeated with great regularity for 15 or 20 or 40 years. Check up on yourself. Analyze your little, trivial habits—which aren't trivial at all in their accumulated effect. You owe it to your family and friends not to add to the necessary irritation that inevitably follows this close occupancy of the globe.

NOT WHAT THEY WANTED

We all know people—too many of them—who are exceedingly insistent upon their rights. They are always proving to themselves and the world that nobody is putting anything over on them. They resent, in any sort of relationship, even with members of their own families, the slightest advantage that anyone may get over them. They always aim to collect every kind of debt, to the last penny. They seem to take a kind of intolerant satisfaction in having made someone suffer because of unwisdom or a mistake. They are forever collecting their pound of flesh.

And what do they get out of that attitude toward life and people? Surely not lasting peace, not peace, not serenity, not happiness.

THE EASY MARK

Don't feel sorry for the easy mark. He is always paying somebody else's debts. He is always getting stuck for this or that or the other thing. He is like a pack horse upon which people hang their troubles. But the man with the easy mark temperament has something that the hard man and the pound-of-flesh man never gets. He finds tranquility. He is usually the sort that can rise above the manifold annoyances and irritations that make the lives of smaller folks unhappy.

POLITICS

While nothing is more deadly than indifference toward public affairs, there is always the danger in campaign times that we, the American people, will take our politics too seriously. It is healthful to remember that the American government will go on, no matter who is elected president. After all, congress holds vastly more possibilities for good and bad government than the presidency does.

NEWS COMMENT and VIEWS

The Diary of a New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK.—The New Yorker gunman isn't anything like the habitual criminal type of person associated with the lay mind, the low-browed, slitt-eyed thugs of the past. The modern gunman is frequently a well-mannered and correctly barbered youth, who patronizes Fifth Avenue tailors and has front row tables at exclusive night clubs. He is one of a new, or heretofore unknown, class of youthful criminals that has grown up since the World war.

A house detective in a famous hostelry told me that he has recognized members of several notorious gangs among dancers at smart afternoon tea dances patronized by persons in the Social Register. At one such dance the middle-aged wife of a more or less prominent man was dancing with a handsome, well-mannered appearing youth, when a bellboy paged her companion. He bowed gracefully and courteously, excused himself and walked into the hall, where a detective was waiting to place him under arrest. He was searched and found to be toting a gun and found to be a member of the "Black Bottom." This, by the way, rather than the hip-pocket or waist-line, is the place the modern gunman carries his "gat."

George White the New Yorker who takes, whether he is entitled to it or not, credit for originating the "Charleston" and "Black Bottom," is endeavoring to make another negroid-like dance popular. He calls it "Cotton-picking," and it puts the dancer through a "daily dozen." If American youth is any healthier than his father, as this said, then modern dances must be a principal reason.

An acquaintance who is in the office of a financier who has a Park Avenue apartment and has something to do with managing the accounts of the butler who presides in the apartment, gave me an idea of how much it costs to live in one of the 12 to 18-room aerial dwellings in Park and adjoining avenues. The rent may be anything from $12,000 to $50,000 a year. Servants cost $1,000 a month, unless there are only two occupants of the apartment, and they get along with cook, butler, maid, and chauffeur. A cook gets $110 a month and room and you don't get a cook. Butlers get from $150 to $175 and room, maids $90, and chauffeur $150. In the case there are children, there must be a governess at $150 additional. The regular servants do laundry or heavy cleaning and these call for additional expense.

The grocer, the fruiter, the butcher, the dairyman and other food bills in the apartment of the financier mentioned above total nearly $2,000 a month. This isn't extraordinary considering that the servants as well as the family are fed, and course the servants aren't very saving in the kitchen.

In two New York families of great wealth, where the fortune is guarded by trustees, no heir or heiress to any part of the money can be married and retain a claim to the estate without a prenuptial agreement signed by both parties. Thus are the family scions protected from show girl "gold-diggers" and "fortune hunters."

With the idea still unadopted by most families, show girls who make a practice of setting rich men's sons drunk and marrying them still have plenty of opportunities. And they continue to take advantage of them, guided and advised by clever lawyers who collect one-half of whatever settlement is made by the family to get rid of the unwelcome daughter-in-law.

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

In the course of an automobile journey across a middle-western state, I was halted by a young man in khaki uniform who informed me that he was under orders to prevent my carrying corn from one county to another lest I spread the ravages of the deadly corn borer. Through I assured him that I had no corn, he insisted on looking under the back seat and making a general search of the car.

This seemed amazing. The only answer could be that he thought I must be interested in secretly spreading damage to farmers' crops. Maybe he suspected me of being in the employ of the corn borer. Interests. But what motive could I have?

The explanation, I think, is simply a silly outcropping of prohibition. We have grown so accustomed to searching boot-leggers for illicit liquor that we are prepared to believe that there's no telling what other contraband goods may secretly be in people's automobiles. A logical further step would be to ask a stranger for a match and if he says he has none, apply for a search warrant.

How To Overcome Excessive Perspiration of the Feet

A predisposition to excessive perspiration of the feet causes great inconvenience — and frequently a good deal of embarrassment. There are two forms of this disease, depending upon affections more or less serious, and will sometimes be constitutional and other times only temporary. Hyperidrosis is one form, and is merely the excessive perspiration, uncharacterized by an objectionable odor. The other is bromidrosis, and this is by far the most unpleasant, since the perspiration is accompanied by a most penetrating and disagreeable odor.

In both disorders, astringent foot powders are very much in order, but in dealing with one, we must concentrate on deodorizing solutions as well as astringent ones.

Your great-grandmother probably knew the simple relief, which consists of aromatic vinegar and camphor. Her faith in this lotion was fully justified, for there are very few cases in which it will not prove efficacious. This may either be rubbed directly on the feet or added to the bath water. A lotion of extract of walnut leaves with alum and borax in it will also be excellent to use after your nightly foot bath.

Perhaps the simplest form of treatment is to apply a 5 per cent alcoholic solution of formaldehyde. After the bath and the lotion, remember to follow with either an astringent or an absorbent powder.

For perspiration, there is the following formulae:

Glycerine ..... 2 oz.
Perchloride of iron ..... 6 oz.
Essence of bergamot ..... 20 drops

A powder for use after bathing is the following:

Salicylic acid ..... 15 grains
Tannic acid ..... 1 dram
Powdered iris root ..... 1 dram
Talcum powder enough to make up ..... 3 oz.

Salicylic acid soap may be used on the feet in the bath, and remember the urgency of frequent changes of shoes and stockings. Wash your stockings nightly in a weak solution of boracic acid.

A good "shoe powder" to shake into shoes is:

Permanganate of ..... 13 grains
Potassium ..... 45 grains
Deodorant talcum ..... 60 grains
Salicylate of soda ..... 2 grains

The following powder, which will be my last, is so pleasant, that I advocate its use, not only against excessive or offensive perspiration, but for the simple pleasure and comfort of it as well.

Salicylic acid ..... 1/2 dram
Boric acid ..... 3 grains
Orris root powder ..... 5 grains
Talc ..... 7 1/2 grains
Starch ..... 12 1/2 grains
Tincture of musk ..... 7 drops
Oil of citron ..... 6 drops
Oil of orange blossoms ..... 2 drops

Baby Training

On my journey from Los Angeles, returning from my vacation, among the interesting people I met were two darling babies (Are babies people?)

The first was Baby Betty, a darling little girl of 11 months. She was brought into the woman's retiring room by her young mother, who placed her on the table. The mother told me that she had begun to train Betty's bowels at about the age of two months, with a little vessel held in her lap; at the age of five months, she began to place her regularly on the vessel for her urination, and now, at the age of 11 months, she was a confirmed dry.

I saw Betty afterwards, asleep on the pullman seat. It was not that she had no need for her undies, which consisted of a pink Italian silk, low-necked combination of vest and tiny ruffled panties which buttoned across the back. Imagine how much more comfortable such a little suit is than heavy napkins.

Betty is an example of what I have been telling you can be done by way of training.

The second baby was Harold, nearing 2 years of age. He sat opposite me at the dining table at lunch, with his mother, and ate all of the vegetables—including spinach—and other things which his mother placed on his plate, with great relish. I noticed he had no milk and I asked his mother about this. She told me that he had been having a quart of milk daily until recently, but when he developed eczema the doctor found out by skin tests that he was sensitive to milk protein. So she had to cut the milk down to a pint a day, which he took with his morning and evening meals. She increased his green vegetables and other foods all around to make up for the milk, and this measure seemed to clear the skin.

Eczema, in both babies and adults, may be due to certain food sensitizations. Frequently it is egg and sometimes milk. One doctor found in his cases that the moist type of eczema the children often have had too much fat, and in the dry type, there was an excess of starchy foods in the diet.

Over-fed and under-fed children are quite prone to have eczema. The overfat child will be helped by having its food limited, and the under-nourished children must have more food. This sometimes seems to aggravate the eczema at first, but until he is better nourished, the disease will not clear up.

Local irritations can also cause eczema. Picard in one of the numbers of the Archives of Pediatrics, calls attention to an eczema which comes out in cold weather and clears up during the summer. Sometimes soap, or the secretions of the skin, if allowed to accumulate, will cause it. But we have to believe that there must be a predisposition, perhaps brought on by wrong diet, which also acts in these cases; otherwise more children would have it.

Any child suffering from eczema should be taken to a children's specialist, for it may be rather serious and very difficult to cure.

The local treatment is to em-

MENU HINT

Peppers Stuffed with Corn Baked Potatoes
Pear Salad with Cream Cheese Salt Wafers Coffee
A package of cream cheese is often a life saver to the busy housewife. Toasted cheese sandwiches have saved many a lunch upon which a menu had not been planned. Cheese may be added to "dress up" a salad by grating a little on top. It gives a piquant finish to the scalloped potato or macaroni dish, and may be used or stuff peppers, tomatoes, celery, cucumbers and fruit for salads.

Today's Recipes.

Corn in Pepper Cases — One pint boiled corn, one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon green pepper, six or eight sweet green peppers, one cup thin cream or milk, one-half teaspoon salt. Cut from each sufficient cooked corn to measure five minutes, rub off skin, cut off stem end and scrape out seeds. Make cream sauce of remaining ingredients, add corn and fill peppers. Place close together in baking dish and bake in hot oven one-half hour.

Pears with Cream Cheese — Pare and halve ripe pears, core. Stuff hollow with cream cheese and serve on lettuce with French dressing or mayonnaise.

Suggestions.

(Important Trifles.)
Light-colored walls make a room look larger than it is, while dark colors make it appear smaller.

Apply thick applications of soothing ointments. If on the face it must be held on, if necessary, by a little mask and it may be necessary to put splints around the elbows so the child cannot scratch.

ISLAND BANS AUTOMOBILES

Sark, in the Atlantic, maintains its ban against automobiles, and the only car to invade the island is still a captive. When the machine was taken to Sark two years ago the 50 inhabitants were greatly excited, for to many it was the first view of an auto. The laws of Sark forbid motors, and a policeman permitted its landing only on condition that it should not be given anywhere on the island. The machine refused to retreat, however, but was towed like a captive to its present resting place in a blacksmith shop, where its engine is kept supplied with power for the little plant.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—The ultra-dry strength is in their singleness of purpose. An ultra-dry is much dryer than an ultra-wet is wet. Indeed, an ultra-wet is not as wet as even a moderate dry is dry—or any dry, of any degree of dryness.

I never met a wet who was wet enough to propose compulsory drinking. I know wets who say a total abstainer denies himself one of the good things of life. I have seen wets tempt others to drink—in fact, urge them to do so—and ridicule them for not doing it—and overdoing it—bad influences—and out and out.

But I never heard of a wet who advocated anything more drastic than optional individual wetness—by law.

Compulsory total abstinence since centuries of experience seems to have proved that nothing less will convince the refractory—is the essence of the dry's creed.

He who favors anything weaker than that is no dry—not in this country. Prohibition has other definitions in some other lands. I speak of the United States.

Our drys do not all agree as to enforcement methods and penalties. Such divergences of opinion mark the difference between moderate and ultra-drys, here in America. All do agree on the principle of compulsion. Any dissenter is moist at least.

When a man joins an organization with some specific political object in view, and pays dues, I assume that that identifies him as something of an "ultra" in that particular line.

We have two such organizations, on the wet-and-dry proposition, with headquarters here in Washington—

The Anti-Saloon League, The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

The league is out flat-footed for Herbert Hoover for president. I know, it has been represented as a Republican adjunct. Some say its enthusiasm for Hoover lies partly in his Republicanism. Maybe, but it would have been for him anyway, as against Al Smith, for anybody who can read knows he is dryer than Al. The league may strain a point when the balance is pretty even, but not in a pronounced case like this.

Say what you will, the league's nerve is middling good.

And the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment? That's out for Al?

Oh, no!

Here is how the association officials explain it—

The association has Republican and Democratic members, both—rather more Republicans than Democrats. Whichever side it took a goodly number of its financial supporters would be sore. It must wait until after election—and THEN it can afford to get back into the wet and dry fight. At present it has to straddle—you can see that, what?

You can see why the drys get the majorities they do, too.

DIDN'T RECOGNIZE SPOUSE

The story is being told of one of the country's leading statesmen whose name was put in nomination by a flowery speaker at one of the conventions. The statesman and his wife were listening in on the radio at home. The speaker had been eulogizing him for a half hour, giving his life history, the story of his rise and a red-hot description of his candidate and his characteristics.

The statesman's wife, called from the room a moment, returned after the speaker had concluded his speech. "Luther," she said (we will say that was his name), "who was that man that speaker was describing?"

LOVER THREATENS TO 'END ALL' IF GIRL WILL NOT MARRY HIM

Do we ever grow too old to enjoy a bit of melodrama? Lovers threaten to "end it all" if their love is frustrated. Parents tell their children that they'll be their cold corpses, dead to all pleadings. The most disconcerting thing with which to meet these heroic moments is banter. Few are proof against good natured raillery.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am almost insane from fear, and I have no one to advise me but you. I was born in a Spanish speaking country and my mother died before we moved here. Since we came here I have learned English and now I tutor Spanish boys in English. Of my former pupils one brought me a young Spaniard who wants to learn English. He has fallen in love with me and I with him. He is very jealous of my other pupils. My father says, 'You are too young to marry.' I must obey, but this boy I must run away with, so he says. He has written me so, 'Carita, you must with me come, or if you do not I shall kill myself, for then I shall know you love me not. I give you one week from the day you have this letter to come to me.' What shall I do, Mrs. Lee? Must I obey, yet I shall die if my lover kills himself. GEORGE-ANN."

LONG NECK—LIFE SAVER!

"Until this moment neither Bob nor I had noticed Cormorant's bill," broke in Mrs. Bobolink, "but now we saw that it was flat and long and had a queer curved point on the end and it was covered with little notches."

"So you are a fisherman too," said I. "We might have guessed it if you had never said a word about that buoy being a fishing post!"

"How?" asked Captain Cormorant, curiously.

"Why, by your feet, that are webbed, and that beak of yours, that looks so much like our old friend Kingfisher's. But would you mind telling me one thing? How did you get your beak all notched up like that?" "I didn't get it notched up," croaked Captain Cormorant. "Let me tell you, it is easy to catch a fish, but it is another matter trying to hang on to it, and many is the fish that would get away from me if my beak were not so rough that it held it from slipping."

"It was plain to be seen that the fellow didn't mind answering questions. Indeed, he acted as if he really liked to talk about himself, and so I thought I would ask him something else."

But before Mrs. Bobolink had a chance to tell her question her husband interrupted her.

"Yes, and what do you think she asked?" cried he. "I never was ashamed to get in my life—such an impertinent question!"

"Sally," what do you do with such a long neck, and why do you twist it about so? I should think you would feel dreadfully uncomfortable with your head so far away from your body most of the time!"

"Cormorant chuckled.

"There are times when it is very convenient to have your head far away from your body," said he. "There is nothing that suits me better than being in the water. I could float about in it the livelong day! I don't mind how wet I get, but there are times when I wish to be where I can see, and of course I can't go on top of the water when my eyes are underneath it. Then is when my long neck comes in handy.

"All I have to do is to stretch my neck up as far as it will go. Out pops my head above the waves. If I see a sail coming I tell my body to hurry and get out of the way and it does. If I stayed under the surface all the time the boat might creep upon me unawares, and hit me!"

OLD WHIG BANNER IS EXHIBITED HERE

A banner used in the presidential campaign of 1840 by John Sexton, the leader of the Whig party in Greene County, is on display in a case erected on a wall in the corridor of the first floor at the Court House outside the office of County Commissioners.

The banner was donated to Greene County by Hannah and Sarah Sexton, of near Old Town. John Sexton, the Whig party leader, was their father.

Headed with the names "Tom, Tip, Tyler," and the word "Greene," (county), the banner bears the slogan: "We hear one soldier's gallant name, and praise another's living fame. Not alone to honor the man, but to save the Republic."

The case will be enclosed with glass.

XENIA OVERWHELMS DAYTON QUOT TEAM

Displaying one of the startling reversals of form for which it has become noted this season, the Xenia Quoit Club overwhelmed North Dayton 16 to 2 in a Miami Valley Quoit League match on the Xenia courts Monday night.

This is the most one-sided defeat inflicted by Xenia on a rival league team this year and the victory is believed to have bettered the local league standing.

The National Cash Register Co., of Dayton, one of the league's strongest teams, will appear in Xenia for a match next Monday night.

RESERVES TO PLAY SERIES WITH COPS

Announcement was made Tuesday by Manager Jesse Chambliss that beginning next Sunday the Reserves will play a three-game series with the Dayton Police baseball team instead of the Eddie Tallors, a colored Springfield nine, as previously announced.

Manager Chambliss learned that the Springfield nine would be unable to open the scheduled series Sunday and for this reason the entire series was called off and the Dayton Police substituted.

FINDS ACCIDENTAL DEATH VERDICT

Dr. F. M. Chambliss, Xenia, county coroner, returned a verdict of accidental death after an inquest into the death of John Mitchell, 39, colored, Dayton, O., who died from a crushed chest and broken legs when struck by an auto on the Xenia-Jamestown Pike, Saturday night.

The inquest was held Monday night with Peter Mitchell, father of the dead man, William Ringer, Clarence Jones, Jacob Sessler and Clarence Ryan, this city, involved in the accident as witnesses.

SCOUT WORK DEMONSTRATION FEATURES PROGRAM ON MONDAY

Greene County Boy Scouts, under the direction of Homer T. Gratz, field executive for the Tecomseh Area Council, participated in their first annual jamboree in Shawnee Park as a Homecoming feature Monday afternoon.

Seven events for which prizes are to be awarded the winners, comprised the program, held in an arena roped off adjoining the new auditorium.

Troop No. 45 had a monopoly of the honors awarded for the opening event on the program, the knot tying contest, finishing both first and second. The second team representing this troop, however, as not scored, however, as the rules of the contest can receive a prize.

The winning troop was composed of Nisley, Shardt, Filson, Mansfield, Cole and Foley. The team finishing second comprised Derrick, Martin, Smith, Friedman, Rockford and Custer.

Two other teams finished ahead of the winning troop but were disqualified when the knots in their ropes came untied and since thoroughness is necessary in this event.

Troop No. 41 won the signalling event with its team composed of Charles Weaver, William Elchman, William Wagner and John Beacham. Troop No. 45, composed of Ellsberry, John Custer, Huatouan and Suesse, finished second.

In the first aid event, Carl Smith and Richard Stiles, representing Troop 45, took first honors.

RED CROSS WORKER SAYS LIFE SAVING SCHOOL IS PLANNED

Fred C. Spaulding, field representative of the American Red Cross, in charge of sixty-six Ohio counties, is spending the three days of the home-coming in Xenia.

Mr. Spaulding says that a program of instruction in first aid and life saving is contemplated by the Red Cross for Greene County, and may be carried out in the next sixty days.

"Any one can be taught in ten minutes how to resuscitate a person by the prone pressure method," said Mr. Spaulding. He said that in countless instances persons are allowed to die because no one available understands resuscitation methods. Persons apparently drowned are often resuscitated by use of the prone pressure method after they have been in the water fifteen or twenty minutes, he said. He said that such methods are superior to use of the pulmotor or any mechanical device for resuscitation.

The Red Cross first aid tent on the grounds of Shawnee Park, has already had several patients. One patient Monday afternoon was a Boy Scout, whose finger was cut almost to the bone by the blow from an axe. Another case attended to Monday was of one of the girl workers on the grounds, whose finger was cut on the jagged edge of a can.

Mrs. Yeola Purdon Edler, executive secretary, and Miss Helen Evers, nurse, are in charge of the tent.

CLOSE OFFICES

County Commissioners announced Tuesday that all county offices in the Court House will remain closed Wednesday afternoon for the closing exercises in connection with the Greene County Home-Coming. The offices will be open during the morning, however.

FALSE ALARM

Firemen answered an alarm at 12 o'clock noon Sunday which was more or less a false alarm. Officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad had ordered three wooden box cars, which had outlived their usefulness, intentionally set on fire. The blazing cars attracted attention and resulted in an alarm being turned in.

UNION SERVICES

Three more union Sunday evening services will be held this season, as follows:

- Sept. 2—Friends Church, Rev. C. O. Nybladh.
- Sept. 9—Episcopal Church, Rev. J. P. Lytle.
- Sept. 16—The First U. P. Church, Rev. D. A. Sellers.

CLIFTON PREPARES FOR BILLY SUNDAY MEETING AT CHURCH

Elaborate preparations are being made for the appearance of the Rev. W. A. "Billy" Sunday, famous evangelist, on the Home-Coming program at Clifton, O., Wednesday September 5.

His appearance is being sponsored by the Clifton Presbyterian Church. He will make a public address in a big tent at 2 p. m.

No admission will be charged but a collection will be taken to help defray expenses.

Those people expecting to hear the evangelist are asked to come early, bring their baskets and eat a picnic dinner beside the cliffs. Folding chairs should be brought if possible. There will be free auto parking space.

The Rev. William Wilson, pastor of the church, persuaded the Rev. Mr. Sunday to appear for the Home-Coming. The evangelist usually does not fill speaking engagements in smaller communities.

NEW FIRE TRUCK IS ON DISPLAY HERE

A new fire truck, having an auxiliary 750-gallon pump unit, recently purchased by City Commission from The Seagrave Corp., Columbus, O., at a cost of $11,000 to strengthen the Xenia Fire Department, was delivered here Monday at noon.

Fire Chief William Hanifan announces the new apparatus will be on display for visitors at the E. Main St. engine house during the Home-Coming celebration. The truck will not be used in the event of a fire until after the Home-Coming, he declared.

Next Mex Head?

Appointment of Emilio Portes Gil, above, as the new secretary of state for Mexico by President Plutarco Calles, indicates that Gil may be nominated for provisional president in December, probably until Calles is re-elected, according to political observers. Gil, until his appointment, was governor of the state of Tamaulipas.

READ THIS FIRST:

Janet Mary James, eighteen, has an ambition to go on the stage, because her mother, who died ... night she was born, had been a famous opera star. In New York Janet meets Ballard Hiley, successful young physician, who is known as a woman hater. At first it was great fun for Janet to have dates with Ballard and tease him about his ideas. Later, Janet knows she loves Ballard, but he keeps her guessing. Mort Goldstein, producer of famous musical shows, sees that Janet has talent and plans to star her in a new musical show. ... rather, a former mountain parson, reaches Broadway, too, and is holding a sensational revival up town. The newspapers learn of this, and give Janet a lot of publicity. Goldstein hopes to sign up the parson for a big revival in Madison square garden while Janet is starring in the "Blue Laws of 1928." Goldstein's latest revue. In the snow is Maxine Griffith, whom Janet helped in the rehearsal days, when the little chorus girl went broke. They became great friends. Janet's arch enemy is Floeline Deslys, who is jealous of Janet's success, and snubs her on every occasion. Janet meets Della Lee Lacy, a show girl, at a night club. Della invites Janet to come and see her little boy Dennis Reily. Goldstein's new show opens with Janet as the star.

Janet persuades Ballard to attend the opening night of the new show.

Floeline, in a rage, determines to get even with Janet. She is seen entering Janet's dressing room, during the show, by Lotus Flower, the Chinese maid. After the show, Ballard goes around to the stage door to meet Janet. Just as he reaches the door he hears angry voices.

Floeline accuses Janet of taking her diamond ring. It is a pretty cheap trick, and while no one believes Floeline, Janet is afraid of the publicity on account of Ballard.

Ballard tries to persuade Janet to give up her part in the show. He says the publicity Janet is getting in the show is not good for her. Janet and Ballard have their first serious disagreement. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVI

He got up suddenly, and took his hat.

"We will have another little talk tomorrow night, Janet. I'll see you after the show. Perhaps we'll both know better what we want to say. I may be able to explain how I feel and why there must be a change in our friendship."

She smiled.

"I'm—I'm afraid," she was holding back the tears—"there isn't much to say; but I give my word of honor—you need have no fear of my not being a good fellow."

He cut her off hurriedly.

"Oh, Janet, not that—but I'm afraid I've done a great deal to make you unhappy without realizing it."

She kissed his cheek, indifferently, and pushed him toward the door, trying to appear light—and as though it really didn't matter.

"Let's not talk any more about it now."

The ending of her happiness—and on the night of her big success. She fell across the bed and lay that way for hours without moving—dumb with pain, unable to cry.

On the night, Ballard drove his car for hours through the country—madly—insanely. What was he to do? Giving her up was too hard. He did not know it would be like that. Surely, he did not love her—not enough to marry and settle down!

And he could never take her any other way. He knew that. He would write a letter to her the next day, explaining in detail his feelings. He knew he could never tell her face to face.

Then he would go away for a few weeks—and rest and try to forget about it.

Janet was awakened the next morning with a loud knock on her door. Who could it be at that hour? She had thrown herself on the bed with all her clothes, and she was in a white evening gown.

"Who is it, please?"

"Are you Miss Janet James?"

"Yes," she was frightened now. "Who is it?"

"An officer from headquarters. Open the door."

Janet trembled. What in the world did it mean? She hesitated a moment, then slowly opened the door. A tall man and a shorter, stouter man stepped in as though they felt at home. The tall one flashed a badge and a paper.

"We have a search warrant here, Miss James. To look for the ring lost at your theater last night."

"We have a search warrant here, Miss James."

with surprise. Suddenly her head went up, angrily.

"Sir, you are very insulting!"

"The stout man looked her over, and smiled.

"Never mind, sister. We ain't meant to be insulted. This is just part of our job. Miss Deslys swore out a search warrant—and a warrant for your arrest."

"For my arrest?" Janet sank into a chair. "For my arrest?"

"Yeah," the tall detective walked over to her closet. "If we don't find it here, we'll have to take you down to headquarters and question you."

Janet was completely at a loss. She sat in the chair, weakly, while they tore everything apart and searched.

When they finished, she was so stunned she scarcely realized that she was climbing into a car with them and going to police headquarters. Outside the detective bureau were several reporters.

"Boy, that gal sure is keen copy," Janet heard one of them say as she passed.

The detectives had allowed her to dress in the kitchen while they searched the studio, and she was stunning in gray from head to her feet. It was a good story—cameras clicked and pencils flashed. Broadway's latest star arrested as a thief.

Floeline Deslys was all in black. She looked hard as nails, and smiled an ugly smile now and then. Janet scarcely glanced at her. She was too angry. They would never find the ring about her or her belongings. So she knew she had nothing to worry about. Her fright had worn off. She held her head up—proudly. What did she care?

The chief of the detective bureau had scarcely started to question Janet when Lotus Flower came in. She was breathless. Without ceremony, she rushed up and pointed to Floeline Deslys.

"Me see that girl in Misses James' dressing room. She hide ring some place. She liar!"

Floeline Deslys stood up and drew her coat around her.

"How ridiculous! I was never in Miss James' dressing room."

Lotus started toward her, and was held back by one of the detectives.

The chief of detectives looked interested. He turned to Janet, kindly.

"What were you wearing when you left the theater last night, Miss James?"

A white evening gown and a white wrap. She was perfectly calm now. Floeline Deslys smiled.

"She did not," she broke in. "She wore a blue evening wrap."

Janet looked puzzled. She turned to the chief.

"May I ask Miss Deslys how she knows what I left the theater in. She did not see me leave."

The chief looked directly at Floeline.

"Did you see Miss James leave?"

"No, but I saw her before leaving, in a blue wrap. I know that is what she wore."

She smiled, indifferently, and shrugged.

"They are trying to put me in jail, saying I took Miss Deslys' diamond ring."

There was a gleam of satisfaction in Floeline's eyes. Goldstein saw it and knew just exactly what was up. He turned on her coldly.

The Theater

Next in importance to the stars of a motion picture ranks the director. Why?

When John and Jane Public go to the theater to see the screening of a production, they usually pick the one showing their favorite star. At least this is the opinion of producers when planning to make a picture. Apparently their theory is right, if box-office returns are to be counted on.

On the other hand, the director action. However, he unconsciously is the king of his unit when the picture is being made. His next not realized until actual "shooting" starts.

Moreover, although this point is rarely taken into consideration, a director must insist upon making the players natural. Neither he nor the audience want "acting." They demand that players go through certain sets of circumstances just as human beings would do if they were encountered by the same. It is up to the director to interpret such actions and see that the actor follows out the ideas. Sincerity is the keynote in the making of a production and this is not to be found in a script. It is up to the man directing.

going public never knows who was behind the camera when the picture was being filmed.

Why, then, is he so important? He is supplied with a story, an adaptation, and then a script, or continuity. He has a cameraman to "shoot" the scenes and light his sets. He has players of experience who are supposed to know how to act. Why, then, wouldn't it be easy sailing for anyone with common sense to sit down, follow the script, tell his cameraman to "shoot" and turn out one good picture after another?

Have you ever had the opportunity of examining a continuity? This is a screen broken down into sequences which are, in turn, broken down into scenes. Every scene necessary to motivate the story is included. The working scenes are there. Every bit of action is worked out for every player, from the long "shots".

The writer can sit in his office, write continuity and visualize the Former Xenian Finds Old Home Town Happy Place To Be After All.

A humorous and instructive picture of the Xenia he knew more than twenty years ago was painted by Russell Greiner, Kansas City, Mo., former Xenian, in an address at the Home-Coming exercises in Shawnee Park auditorium Monday afternoon.

Mr. Greiner, who was the author of a clever little booklet entitled "Seeing Xenia," at the time of the Home-Coming celebration here in 1908, also inspired plans for the present Home-Coming. He presided as chairman of the Monday afternoon program. Following is his talk in full:

What's in a name? In traveling over this country if you announce yourself a citizen or a former citizen of Xenia, Ohio you immediately bring forth the remark, tinged with a bit of humor, "Oh, yes, that's the town named after a disease." That places what would be termed in business "a sales value" on the name of this splendid old city. You name it from Newark, Springfield or Urbana and many other cities and in ten minutes they would have forgotten your town or its geographical location, whether in Ohio, New Jersey or Illinois, and always from Ohio. I venture to say that at least one hundred men in Kansas City have called me over the telephone in the last few years and said to me—"I passed through Xenia, your old home town, the other day on the Pennsylvania returning from down east and I immediately thought of you and am calling to tell you that Xenia still 'Xenies'." Hundreds of American cities would willingly give real money to have their names as firmly fixed in the minds of thousands of people.

GLORIOUS RELIEF FROM RHEUMATISM THROUGH KONJOLA

This Man Suffered Agonies With Stomach and Kidney Troubles

This surprising medical compound, Konjola, which the Konjola Man is explaining in person to large crowds daily at the Gallagher Drug store, Xenia, has not only become the sensation of this city,

MR. J. M. SNODGRASS
E. Main St.

but is also the talk of the cities and towns throughout this section. For instance, just a few days ago Mr. J. M. Snodgrass, R. F. D. 1, Jamestown, Ohio (near Xenia), made the following statement about Konjola while talking to the Konjola Man.

"Konjola stopped the rheumatism from bothering me and it greatly relieved the stomach and kidney troubles that were part of me for so many years," said Mr. Snodgrass. "I want to endorse this remedy to the public for it surely did the work in my case."

"The stomach trouble I had was the worst affliction I ever heard of. It seemed that as soon as I would eat anything gas would form in the pit of my stomach and chest. The pressure of this gas was so great that at times I could hardly get my breath. A hot, vile liquid would rise into my mouth and made it burn like fire. This ailment had been with me for five long years and during that time I had done everything I ever heard of for relief, but to no avail. I was terribly constipated too, and in spite of taking all kinds of laxatives the trouble ran and I was in agony with that. It seemed to center in my shoulder blades and to spread to all parts of my body. When I would climb the stairs it would take me an hour. I couldn't even raise my arms to comb my hair. Even the weight of clothing hurt me. My kidneys were in an awfully disordered condition and at night when I went to bed I had to rise four or five times due to weakness in my bladder. When I got up the next morning I felt tired and worn out."

"Finally a friend told me about Konjola and how it had helped him and so I finally decided to try it. Almost the very first bottle seemed to help me and as I continued with the treatment I could notice a wonderful improvement all over my body. It seemed to be what my body had always been waiting for and it cleansed my system of all those poisons that had long been there. I kept on taking this medicine until I soon had completed a full treatment. Now, my stomach doesn't bother me at all. I can sit down to the table and eat whatever is placed before me and not suffer one bit. The gas doesn't form any more and now I never did away with the rheumatism and now I haven't an ache or a pain anywhere. I feel fine now and I want to endorse this medicine all that I can."

The Konjola Man is at the Gallagher Drug Store, Xenia, Ohio, where he is daily meeting the public, introducing and explaining the use of this remedy. Free

Xenia has one outstanding distinction—it never spills the beans of either political party. It's always regular, never embarks on a political crusade, never enlists in a combat to purify affairs either local, state or national, but ways votes the ticket, sometimes with a protest at the bitterness of the pill but always votes it straight. Its citizens are like William Allen White says he is—"An independent every day in the year except election day."

Xenia's considerable of its charm and neighborly serenity when it paved Main and Detroit Streets and robbed us of the twice a day parade of boys, driving home deep in velvet, dust, driving home with the coming of paved streets and automobiles much of this neighborly feeling has passed out. In these good old days everyone knew everyone else, they knew their cow and how much milk she gave and none were too busy to gossip.

Bob Kingsbury, Charlie Jobe, Fred Scheil, Ed Schmidt and Henry Fetz knew each of their customers and prospective customers personally. They listened with an attentive ear and real interest to the family gossip of housewives; traded and trafficked with the farmers and when they paid their bills, presented along with the receipt a token of good will in the shape of a sack of candy, a cigar, a pair of suspenders or a necktie. Those were the good old days when the town had many interesting and harmless characters. Back in the old days when Morris sold handkerchiefs out of a grip in front of the Court House and talked against the noise of a Yankee boy hitting machine. On the other end of the public square would be Adam Jackson selling oranges from a wagon at 10c a dozen, the Seldomridge boys with a stock of axe handles and Ned Owens, the fish man, displaying his wares on an open cart. Jim Scott selling his ice cream candy and John Winters with his peanut stand, while in undisturbed serenity Lish Manly rested on the Court House steps with his seldom used saw-buck by his side.

Semi-occasionally this Saturday afternoon carnival would be disturbed by Sol Harner and John Clifton, none too gently, dragging one of the Finlaw boys to the calaboose for indulging too freely in lemon extract.

Every Saturday afternoon Hawkins, the horse trainer, contributed to the entertainment by dusting about the streets in a racing sulky drawn by a sleek and shiny black trotter while Bundy, the hack driver, and Pony Sweet paused to admire Hawkins' horse.

In those good old days the 4th of July was a real event, and in such years as it was possible to finance it, it was the gala event of the year. The folks gathered in the county seat from Bellbrook, Bowersville, New Burlington, New Jasper, Cedarville and even from such far distant points as Grape Grove. In those days they came in farm wagons with pigs and mules on the front seat and with their progeny and bulking lunch baskets in the back of the wagon on the beds of sweet scented hay, the girls self-conscious in starched dresses and sashes and the boys uncomfortable in shoes and collars.

All sorts of sports were staged for their amusement. At noon in the Court House yards the women folks spread repasts of fried chicken, preserves, pickled eggs and pies and a family's social standing depended on the size of their lunch basket. In the afternoon, groggy and sleepy, from such a feast without exercise, they would gather about the band stand and hear the speakers fight the war and free the negroes while some follower of a radical movement would beg for a chance to free the whites. The closing event of the day would be a band concert in the evening by the Lucas Silver Cornet Band and in later years the Sons of Veterans Band.

How well I recall my first job as a boy in Xenia. It was passing hand bills advertising a shoe sale at Hicks' Shoe Store. Homer Hicks, who traveled for many years for a Boston Shoe House, wrote the copy. He always opened with some startling statement and wound up with a praise review of their great values in merchandise about to be slaughtered. I would look in his impressive presence with the hope he would take me into his confidence and impart some of the knowledge he had acquired by traveling and experience. I secretly nursed the hope that he would recognize my sterling qualities and reveal to me the source of his great wisdom but he never did.

Always in the mind of a man lingers the memories of the old swimming hole. As lads we started with Ten Foot and Sandy Bottom out at Mike Swishers, now desecrated by a golf club. Early in the teens we graduated to the Ford at the river. No more do the bare foot boys drive the cows back and forth to pasture, no more do dreamy idlers lounge on the steps of the Court House. Dairies and pasteurization plants have abolished the family cow. Ice manufacturing plants have done away with the skating ponds. Sanitary swimming pools have substituted tile lined have been substituted for Ten Foot and Sandy Bottom. The movies and motor cars have ended the isolation of the farmer and the thrill of the 4th of July has passed out of the country boy's life.

Roberts pasture now contains a Carnegie Library and supervised play grounds. Kline's ice pond is a public park. Swishers farm where we played Indian is now a golf club.

Roberts Villa, one of the great show places, is a Masonic Temple.

Theo Morris, the faker, Adam Jackson, the orange man, axe handle Seldomridge and Lish Manly are all dead and gone.

All the streets are paved and all the store fronts on Main and Detroit Streets have been replaced with plain dignified styles of up-to-

Up-to-date residences and bungalows have driven out the ornate fret work and elaborate towers. The St. George Hotel has passed into the discard.

The Gazette has linotype machines and a press association franchise.

Chain stores with bright colored fronts abound.

Sidewalk displays of merchandise are passe.

Horse drawn fire apparatus has passed out of the picture.

Shops are Shoppes and Restaurants are Cafes.

The Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs are established institutions.

A city manager form of government reigns at the City Hall.

Theological students no longer grab off all the eligible girls.

The hitchhiking racks that surrounded the Court House square have disappeared.

Torch light parades are no longer a part of political campaigns.

Boys parades of flaming cat-tails soaked in kerosene are a lost art.

Surries and phaetons no longer pass in procession on Main Street.

Honfres celebrating political victories have ceased to blaze and belch forth black smoke at the intersection of Detroit and Main Streets.

Horse shoeing shops have been supplanted with filling stations.

Green street has lost the post office but gained the movie house.

Wooden awnings across the entire sidewalk have given way to the flapping canvas.

Grocery store candy, the greatest of children's delicacies is but a memory.

Cigarette stubs now litter the sidewalks where the stubs of Wrights Havanas once held sway.

Livery stables are now garages. Fifers, Richardsons and Kyles Livery stables are but a memory.

How many of you can remember Leon Snively's doggeral on the entrance to Kyle's Livery Stable—"Whip light and drive slow and pay your bill before you go?"

Previous to the home-coming of August 1908, I wrote a little book "Seeing Xenia with Home-comers" and in that book I referred to thirty-eight citizens in Xenia in the twenty elapsing nineteen years that have not here to greet us as they have passed to the great beyond, but we tenderly cherish their memories however humble their contribution to the history of the old town.

Like every city of its size Xenia has had dreams of industrial greatness. At times when the town seethed with excitement and rumors the old timers, known as anti-progressives and moss-backs, retreated to their prayer closets and communed with the Lord. They emerged the town boosters but their prayers were answered and the community's welfare and morals were preserved from the evils that would be washed in on the tide of industrial progress. The boosters' vision of factories with five belching smoke stacks and five story buildings was continued on in the even tenor of its ways, a beautiful homelike refined residence city, an ideal place in which to live.

Brick, stone and mortar are not the Xenia of my boyhood memory. It's the kindly faces of the good people that shine like a beacon across the sea of memory, many of whom have long since been swept out into the unknown.

CHIEF TAKES RIDE ON RUN-AWAY CYCLE

Police Chief M. E. Graham took an unscheduled ride in a motorcycle side car which had its serious as well as humorous aspects for a time during the Home-Coming parade in the business district Monday night.

Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, was leading the parade, clearing traffic on Detroit St., for the marchers, with Chief Graham riding in the side car.

Reaching Main and Detroit Sts., the traffic officer stopped the cycle, but left the motor running, while he got out to adjust the automatic flash signal device at the intersection.

Suddenly in some unexplainable manner, the machine jumped in gear and shot forward at about thirty miles an hour. It zig-zagged in a crazy manner for about twenty five feet and Chief Graham, concluding there was need for instant action of some kind, grabbed the handle-bars and steered the cycle into the curb.

The motorcycle crashed into a parked auto, tearing off the running board and slightly damaging the motorcycle. Chief Graham was unhurt.

The auto was owned by C. F. Williamson, Albany, Indiana, former Xenian, who laughingly bewailed the fact he had motored all the way back to his old home town only to be run into by the police chief.

LUNCHEON GUEST

PARIS, Aug. 28.—Frank B. Kellogg, American secretary of state, who came here to sign the treaty for the abolition of war, was guest of honor today at a luncheon given by President Doumergue, of France, at his summer home in Rambouillet. Secretary Kellogg was accompanied to Rambouillet by Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador.

The Wilmington Boy Scout Band was awarded first prize for band entrants with the O. S. and S. O. Home Cadet Band taking second prize of $10.

Delta Theta Tau Sorority won a prize of $10 for appearance. The sorority was the only organization to have a decorated float in the parade. The auto bearing members of the sorority was decorated with crepe paper of many colors.

Motorcycle policemen followed by L. S. Barnes as grand marshal and members of the police department headed the procession. Next in line came Dayton Council, No. 8, D. of A., with a women's seventeen-piece band and seventy-eight marchers, followed by the Wilmington thirty-six-piece Boy Scout band and forty Greene County Boy Scouts.

Trailing the Scouts were the Evening Star, D. of A., Osborn, with thirty-six marchers, the O. S. and S. O. Home cadet band of forty pieces; Phoenix Rebekah, forty pieces; and the O. O. F. with a those principles and live them." Making a strong appeal for law enforcement, Dr. McChesney asserted that the "law is founded on practically every law is founded on firm principles of justice." He advocated inflicting the full penalty of the law on all criminals regardless of outside conditions.

Turning to the subject of liberty and freedom, the speaker warned that it takes eternal vigilance to maintain liberty.

"Let us support our public schools. Let us not criticize—that is destructive. Give a constructive emphasis to the schools and stand by your teachers."

Closing his address, Dr. McChes-

ney declared that "if Kellogg has his way, the war drum will no longer throb, battle flags will be furled and there will be peace around the world."

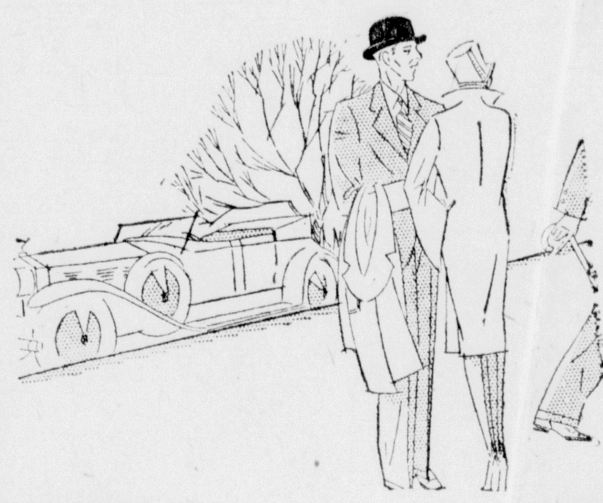

The afternoon program was held in connection with the observance of the second day of the Home-Coming as "School and Lodge Day."

Russell Greiner, Kansas City, Mo., former Xenian, acted as chairman of the exercises and introduced Dr. McChesney. Mr. Greiner was originally introduced as the presiding officer by Mayor John W. Prugh, who also gave a welcome to former residents on behalf of the city.

In his welcoming speech, Mayor Prugh pointed with pride to the progress made by Xenia in the last twenty years and enumerated several of the principal changes that have taken place.

Musical entertainment was furnished by the Bath Twp. Consolidated School Orchestra. Following Dr. McChesney's address, the program closed with the Rev. H. B. McElree delivering the benediction.

With thousands of people lining the streets and others stationed at every available vantage point, the first parade in connection with the Greene County Home-Coming, with school children and lodges from Xenia, Osborn, Springfield and Montgomery and Clinton Counties taking part, was held in the downtown business section early Monday night.

It is estimated that there were at least 500 costumed marchers in the parade.

Prizes were awarded by the Home-Coming committee to Greene County participants in the procession.

First prize of $25 for the largest number in line from a Greene County organization was awarded to Xenia Lodge, No. 52, I. O. O. F. Second prize of $10 went to Pride of Xenia, No. 140 and Obadiah Lodge No. 160, local chapters of the Daughters of America.

Drill Is Feature; Dancing Attracts Young Folks

Fully 5,000 people are estimated to have gathered at Shawnee Park Monday night to witness the flag presentation ceremony of Obadiah Council, No. 160, Daughters of America, to Greene County Boy Scouts, held in the newly-completed auditorium.

The pavilion was filled to capacity and thousands more, unable to gain entrance, were prevented from hearing the speeches although able to witness the exercises.

The program opened immediately after the grand parade disbanded with an address by Mrs. Carrie D. Faulkner, national councillor, Daughters of America, followed by music by the Daughters of America Band, a women's musical organization from Dayton.

A brief address by Mrs. Myrtle Wood, state councillor, D. of A., preceded the actual presentation of a beautiful flag to Greene County Boy Scouts by Mrs. Minnie Pillsbury.

M'CHESNEY SPEAKS ON HERITAGE GIVEN XENIA BY PIONEERS

Urges Principles Of Forefathers Be Maintained

Discussing the subject "Our Heritage," Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of Cedarville College, urged the maintenance of the three fundamental principles our pioneer forefathers brought with them to this country—justice, equality and liberty—in an address featuring the Home-Coming exercises at Shawnee Park auditorium Monday afternoon.

Dr. McChesney carried the audience back in memory to the early days when Indians inhabited this territory; how when the white man came the Indians believed they owned this ground and how they contested with the intruders, eventually being pushed westward.

"This memory is sacred to the soil on which we stand today. The Indian has left us a material heritage. 'We are living in a new day,' declared the speaker. 'Progress is being made along all lines—moral, mental, physical and spiritual. Many people are afraid of the outcome, but I have no quarrel with modern youth as long as the sturdy principles of our forefathers are maintained. I am not here to criticize the young people for their free ways. I care for nothing else providing they get

The alleged blasphemous statement, according to information at police headquarters, is alleged to have been made by Dr. Kallen at the Sacco-Vanzetti rally in scenic auditorium Thursday night. ### FIND THREE BODIES AS WATERS REGEDE; SEARCH CONTINUES

New York Floods Cause $1,000,000 Worth Of Damage

ELLENVILLE, N. Y., Aug. 28.—With property damage as the result of the cloudburst in the Roundout Valley exceeding $1,000,000 state and local police today are attempting to check definitely the number of lives lost in the flood waters.

Three bodies have been recovered, but it is feared that the death list may be increased. The waters in the sixteen-mile stretch of Roundout Valley have receded and residents are returning to their water-soaked homes. Many homeless are being cared for by neighbors.

The raging torrent of Roundout Creek washed out thirty bridges. It is estimated, and telephone and telegraph wires in the vicinity are down and water systems paralyzed. A section of the New York, Ontario and Western railroad tracks were washed out at Wawarsing and paved highways throughout Ulster and Sullivan Counties, the scene of the cloudburst, were badly damaged. Along the roads many automobiles were found deserted by their occupants who had sought safety on higher ground from the rapidly rising waters.

The three known dead are Charles Lavery, 50, of Paterson, N. J., Philip Blatt of Lackawack and Frank Weller of Grahamsville.

Residents here received first warning of the danger about 2 p. m. Sunday when local police were notified that the waters of Roundout Creek were rising rapidly. Rain fell incessantly and by 5 p. m. Napanoch was engulfed.

RECORD BREAKING CROWD AT OPENING DAY OF STATE FAIR

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 28.—With a canopy of clouds floating overhead deflecting the rays of old Sol today, the indications were that the second day of the Ohio State Fair, owned by Alex. Robinson, Churchill, won first prize in the three-gaited stallion, mare or gelding, 14.2 and not over 15 hands high, class in the opening night's horse show. Another of Robinson's horses also took first prize—Dimity Gay, in the five gaited novice class. The award in this case was a loving cup given by the Beulah Park Jockey Club, of Columbus.

Other winners were: five gaited gelding class, Land of Longview owned by J. L. Kuhns, Greensburg, Pa.; ponies, other than Shetlands, 12.1 to 14.2 hands high, Surprise owned by S. M. Ross, Columbus.

Three gaited, combination for stallion, mare or gelding, the Golt-owned by Minton Stables, Galtboursville, Ky.; road hack, Bedford Boy owned by James Marker, Columbus; Hunters, heavy, Linerick owned by Charles I. Fisher, Detroit.

One of the interesting sidelights reported yesterday was the "neel cooling" of John Philip Sousa and his band members outside the gates of the fair grounds, because they were without tickets or proper credentials and unrecognized by hardboiled gatekeepers.

When asked for his pass, Sousa is reported to have answered, "My face is usually my pass," but it didn't register with the gatekeepers, and the famous band master and composer was forced to wait until Ralph Combs, state fair press agent, arrived and made introductions.

She declared that elderly people, emulating the example of Henry Ford, are going in for dancing as never before, and that young and old who are plump, or downright fat, are wondering why they never thought of it before.

"Girls who have lost their figures and those who want to keep slim and trim have forsaken the daily dozen for dancing," she asserted. "Acrobatic, eccentric and tap dancing is taking the country by storm."

ARRESTS PROMISED SOON BY DETECTIVE DIRECTING PROBE

Councilman Made Target Of Gunmen Continues Probe

AKRON, Ohio, Aug. 28.—Spurred by an aroused public sentiment, authorities here were putting forth every effort today to run down the thugs who have made two attempts to assassinate Councilman Kyle Ross since he was appointed recently as a special investigator of vice and crime.

"I'll stay on this job personally until we get the man we are after, even if it takes a year," Detective Chief Ed. McDonnell declared after working thirty-six hours, without sleep, during which he questioned many underworld characters. Arrests will probably come soon, however, McDonnell said, since "underworld leaders themselves, realizing they have made a mistake by resorting to violence, are disposed to make somebody the goat and get this thing quieted down."

Ross declares his investigation will continue.

The cowardly acts of my enemies prove more conclusively than all the evidence my undercover workers have collected that Akron is in danger of becoming a second Chicago," he stated.

The first attempt on the life of Councilman Ross was made last Friday night by intruders who entered his home during his absence, opened the gas jets and cut off the electricity. Ross, returning home, was unaware that the house was full of gas and was about to strike a match, when the electric lights failed to turn on, when a neighbor deterred him. Had he ignited the match an explosion would probably have resulted.

Sunday night, gunmen entered the house and set fire to the basement. Ross, awakened by his wife, pursued the prowlers and exchanged shots with them from his back porch. A neighbor, Ed. Hardesty, also fired several shots from a rifle at the shadowy figures, from a bedroom window.

A local newspaper has offered a reward of $1,000 for the capture and conviction of the should-be assassins and the city council is expected to also post a reward.

CARRIES BATTLE TO FOE BY CHALLENGING PARTY FARM RECORD

Nominee Points Out His Own Efforts For Farmers

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Senator Charles Curtis, Republican candidate for vice president, in a speech at the state fair grounds here today fired the opening gun in the G. O. P. campaign to capture New York state, Governor Al Smith's own bailiwick, by contrasting the Republican record on farm relief legislation with that of the Democrats and pointing out what he, personally, did in behalf of the agriculturists of the country.

The vice-presidential nominee told the assembled farmers that when the federal farm loan board was able to meet the demands upon it for loans he introduced a bill authorizing the government to purchase $50,000,000 of the bonds which enabled it to resume loaning on farm property. The bill was passed and signed by President Harding.

Senator Curtis said that as a result of this legislation he received a letter from A. F. Lever, a Democratic member of the board, who wrote that he could "hardly conceive of anything that you (Curtis) might have done which is going to have such a far-reaching and lasting beneficial effect upon the agricultural situation now afoot in the future."

Describing the plight of the farmer, Senator Curtis said that soon after the war congress realized that no class of America's population had suffered more by readjustment of prices from the high points attained during the war than the farmers.

When President Harding came into office on March 4, 1921, Curtis said, the members of the cabinet and Republican members of congress realized that early action on legislation to relieve the farmer should be had, so the emergency tariff act was passed and signed.

"In the senate only seven Democrats voted to increase the duty on wheat from thirty to forty cents per bushel. While thirty-one Republicans voted for the increase only two Republicans voted against it and twenty-five Democrats voted against it. Only nine Democrats voted for the final passage of the emergency tariff act and thirty-four Republicans voted for it. Twenty-six Democrats and four Republicans voted against it."

Senator Curtis said the emergency tariff act was of great help to the farmers and stockmen. He pointed out, too, that soon after President Harding was inaugurated a law was enacted authorizing the War Finance Corporation to extend further credits to aid in carrying and disposing of agricultural products and to provide credit for agricultural purposes. He also detailed a number of other pieces of legislation that were enacted for the benefit of the farmer at a time when the plight of the agriculturalist was acute.

BELIEVE FIVE LOST FROM TUG

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Thrown into the waters of the East River when the tug boat Volunteer was dashed to bits and sunk in a collision with the Fall River liner Chester W. Chapin today, four or five men were missing, and believed drowned.

Eleven of their shipmates were rescued by the tugboat Haverd, and landed at the foot of One Hundred and Thirty Eighth Street.

The liner, carrying 150 passengers from Providence, R. I., careened wildly out of her course and ran into the rocks of the treacherous channel. She was stuck firmly aground for two hours until the rising tide put her afloat again, and she made her way to Pier 14, North River at the foot of Vesey Street.

THREE JOCKEYS ARE INJURED BY SPILL

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Three jockeys, suffering from serious injuries, are in the hospital here today as a result of one of the most serious turf accidents in recent years.

The accident occurred during the Vermont steeplechase last yesterday afternoon. Fair Class with W. Marsters up stumbled at the jump in front of the club house, pitching Marsters over his head.

As Marsters tried to get up Fair Class trotted him and dashed riderless into the field near a hedge, running into Star Pansy, ridden by F. Thorndike, and Uppercrest, piloted by C. Ludwig. The impact threw both riders out of their saddles.

Marsters is suffering from a fractured skull; Thorndike has a fractured right leg; and Ludwig's

THOUSANDS ARRIVE TO ENJOY GREENE COUNTY DAY TUESDAY

Tuesday, the third day of the Home-Coming, is being celebrated as Greene County Day.

Tuesday morning was set aside for sight-seeing trips over the city and in viewing the various exhibits, including the railroad exhibits, the flower show and the historical display at Central High School.

The grand auto parade, participated in by farmers, merchants, business men and manufacturers of Greene County, was scheduled for 1:30 o'clock through the downtown streets, disbanding at Shawnee Park, where R. W. Dunlap, assistant U. S. Secretary of agriculture, was scheduled to make the principal address at a program beginning at 3 o'clock in the park.

O. E. Bradute, Xenia, former president of the American and Ohio Farm Bureau Federations, who will be host to Mr. Dunlap during his Home-Coming visit here, was to preside as chairman. Band music was also a scheduled feature.

At 4 o'clock a reception will be held honoring United States Senator S. D. Fess, Yellow Springs with the reception committee in charge.

Between 4:30 and 5:30 planes from Wright Field will stage a daylight "aerial parade" over the city. Twelve planes instead of six, as originally thought, will participate in the air exposition Tuesday and again Wednesday at the same hour.

In the evening, Tuesday, the feature will be the ox-roast and carnival at Cox Memorial Athletic Field. This will last from 5:30 to 9:30 after which dancing will be enjoyed in the park auditorium until 12 o'clock.

The fourth and closing day of the celebration, Wednesday, will be observed as "Patriotic Day."

With the morning hours devoted to visiting sites of interest and touring the city in autos which may be obtained at Home-Coming headquarters, the military parade will open the program at 1:30 p. m.

All military and allied organizations are invited to join in the march over downtown streets to the south entrance of the Court House, where a flag and flag pole, newly-erected, gift of the American Legion to Greene County, will be formally dedicated with an appropriate ceremony.

Following the program, the parade will reform and march to Shawnee auditorium, where another aerial circus will be witnessed. The Legion will serve an old army style supper between 6 and 7 p. m.

The final assembly will be held at 7 p. m. when William Macracken, assistant secretary of commerce, in charge of aviation, will make the main address. Gen. Benson W. Hough, Columbus, will be chairman. Dancing will be held later in the auditorium.

That Leviathan of the rails, the modern passenger locomotive, will be on the Springfield branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad opposite the plant of the Greene County Lumber Company. Note its clocklike action, that is almost like human intelligence.

Then make another trip. See the puny infant, its pioneer ancestor, on the Baltimore and Ohio tracks.

These two pieces of mechanism represent nearly 100 years of man's motive progress, between 1832 and 1928.

Ninety-six years have seen the baby grow into a monster. But the baby in its time undoubtedly was the source of more awe, more interest, than the monster of today.

Visit the Pennsylvania Railroad exhibit, and let John E. Daly, former assistant trainmaster on the Cincinnati division and experienced engineer explain the workings of the monster to you. It may be a little hard for the lay mind to grasp. But man, beside this product of his genius, seems even more puny than the baby thing he first taught to run by the power of steam. He seems to have put some of his soul, as well as a great deal of his intellect into the Titan that he now calls the K-4-S.

This latest type of the passenger locomotive was built in 1927. It weighs 208,800 pounds. The wheel base of engine and tender is seventy-five feet and four inches. It has a steam pressure of 205 pounds to the square inch. Its tractive power is 44,460 pounds. Its fire box is twelve feet long and seven feet wide, and into this maw the fireman can shovel tons of coal.

But the most wonderful thing about this monster is the automatic train control which was first put into use in July, 1926.

The engineer sits on his leather seat beside the control. Ahead of him is line with his vision, is fied rails, and imparts it to the lights in front of the engine man's eyes. Should he doze for a moment or his attention wander and he not see the change of the lights at once, this monster takes no chances with the precious lives in its charge. It stops at once.

The motive power of the vast engines of this type is almost unlimited. They have been run as high as ninety-seven miles an hour on the main line between Xenia and Columbus. All tracks to accommodate the K-4-S have been equipped with steel rails weighing 130 pounds a yard. The old rails weighed 110 pounds.

The big locomotives run through Xenia carrying the New York to St. Louis and the New York to Cincinnati trains.

By way of comparison, the Pennsylvania has on exhibit the type of passenger engine known as D-16 built in 1903, and still in service on branch lines. This engine, which was considered a Titan in its day, weighs 141,100 pounds, has a tractive force of 23,902 pounds, wheel base of a little over fifty-five feet and carries 5000 gallons of water and eight tons of coal. The old and reverse lever is used to control the engine while the compressed air control is used on the newer type.

Ability of engineers to take water on the run is also a feature of the new type of engine. This is performed by means of a lever operated scoop under the tank, which can be lowered into the mile long shallow tanks placed at intervals between the rails.

Should all be clear, the light shows through the perpendicular dots at the top.

But suddenly the engineman, his hand on the control lever, sees the light in the dots change. They are now at an angle and are warning him that all is not clear. Unless he immediately acknowledges that he has received the warning by pulling a lever at his right, the train within ten seconds will come to an abrupt stop, all brakes set. To start it again the engineman must leave the locomotive and place it in operation by apparatus underneath the monster.

The soul of this automatic regulation is in the control box, a magical thing at the front of the engine, which is constructed something like a radio and which receives the signal from the electric

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

LASTING BEAUTY—Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain: but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised. Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates.—Prov. 31:30 and 31.

"ABOLITION OF POVERTY"

"No modern economist has better stated our problems of national progress than has Herbert Hoover," states C. W. Barron, of the Boston News Bureau and other Barron publications.

This dean of financial writers thinks Hoover is right when he declares, "Our purpose is to build in this nation a human society, not an economic system."

"And the abolition of poverty is most directly promoted as he so clearly points out, by the upbuilding of the family rather than the upbuilding of the factory."

"The old world and its political systems have denied equal opportunity to man. Man has been permitted to feel oppression from class distinction, from aggregated wealth and from heredity. We have been struggling as a race for the freedom of man. Under Mr. Hoover that struggle must go on—a struggle for freedom and opportunity. His opportunity, and his right to labor to abolish all his forms of poverty, must be sacredly guarded."

"The leadership that Mr. Hoover would give us in this respect must be followed in state, city and village, and one of the measures promoting man's opportunity to labor and conserve himself and the community against the waste of idle hours is to regulate public improvements so as to tide over periods of slackness in labor demand."

"What, in a word, does Mr. Hoover mean by the abolition of poverty?"

"He means the right to labor—opportunity for the individual not the abolition of labor, which is perhaps God's greatest gift to man," said Mr. Barron.

VALUE OF NATIONAL PARKS

Last year 2,354,643 people visited the national parks of the United States. Yosemite park drew the most of all, with over 490,000 visitors.

The government did a wonderful thing for the country at no great cost, when it provided this system of 19 parks, in which people can enjoy the wonders of nature and find inexpensive ways of spending a vacation. The many thousands of people who camp out in these parks have probably saved many times as much money as the upkeep of the parks cost.

One result has been to cultivate a love for nature and simple living, and people who have roughed it in these parks have come home more self-reliant and resourceful. Now what is needed is to see this system extended to spots of beauty and grandeur all over the country.

What many towns need is not so much new industries coming in, as more home town loyalty to keep the old money from going out.

While the young crowd are trying to look older, the older folks are trying to appear younger.

It has been suggested that political candidates be subjected to mental tests. Why not voters?

Not much use to go in for a white collar job, unless you can earn enough to keep that collar clean.

MANNERISMS

Probably you do several little things every day that annoy your wife. You have a mannerism you are unconscious of, but it is exceedingly irritating after having been repeated with great regularity for 15 or 20 or 40 years. Check up on yourself. Analyze your little, trivial habits—which aren't trivial at all in their accumulated effect. You owe it to your family and friends not to add to the necessary irritation that inevitably follows this close occupancy of the globe.

NOT WHAT THEY WANTED

We all know people—too many of them—who are exceedingly insistent upon their rights. They are always proving to themselves and the world that nobody is putting anything over on them. They resent, in any sort of relationship, even with members of their own families, the slightest advantage that anyone may get over them. They always aim to collect every kind of debt, to the last penny. They seem to take a kind of intolerant satisfaction in having made someone suffer because of unwisdom or a mistake. They are forever collecting their pound of flesh.

And what do they get out of that attitude toward life and people? Surely not lasting satisfaction, not peace, not serenity, not happiness.

THE EASY MARK

Don't feel sorry for the easy mark. He is always paying somebody else's debts. He was always getting stuck for this or that or the other thing. He is like a pack horse upon which people hang their troubles. But the man with the easy mark temperament has something that the hard man and the pound-of-flesh-man never gets. He finds tranquility. He is usually the sort that can rise above the manifold annoyances and irritations that make the lives of smaller folks unhappy.

POLITICS

While nothing is more deadly than indifference toward public affairs, there is always the danger in campaign times that we, the American people, will take our politics too seriously. It is healthy to remember that the American government will go on, no matter who is elected president. After all, congress holds more possibilities for good and bad government than the presidency does.

New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK—The New Yorker isn't anything like the habitual criminal type of person associated with the lay mind, the low-browed, slitt-eyed thugs of the past. The modern gunman is frequently a highly mannered and correctly barbered youth, who patronizes Fifth Avenue tailors and has front row tables at exclusive night clubs. He is one of a new, or heretofore unknown, class of youthful criminals that has grown up since the World war.

A house detective in a famous hotel told me that he has recognized members of several notorious gangs among dancers at smart afternoon tea dances patronized by persons in the Social Register. At one such dance the middle-aged wife of a more or less prominent man was dancing with a handsome, well-mannered appearing youth, when a bellboy passed her companion. He bowed gracefully and courteously, excused himself and walked into the hall, where a detective was waiting to place him under arrest for the murder of a policeman. He was searched and found to be totting a gun under his arm at his chest. This, by the way, rather than the hip-pocket or waist-line, is the place the modern gunman carries his "cat."

George White the New Yorker who takes, whether he is entitled to it or not, credit for originating the "Charleston" and "Black Bottom," is endeavoring to make another neorid-like dance popular. He calls it "Cotton-picking," and it puts the dancer through a "daily dozen." If American youth is any healthier than his father, as this said, then modern dances must be a principal reason.

An acquaintance who is in the office of a financier who has a Park Avenue apartment and has something to do with managing the accounts of the butler who presides in the apartment, gave me an idea of how much it costs to live in one of the 12 to 18-room aerial dwellings in Park and adjoining avenues. The rent may be anything from $12,000 to $50,000 a year. Servants cost $1,000 a month, unless there are only two occupants of the apartment and they get along with cook, butler, maid, and chauffeur. A cook gets $110 a month and room or you don't get a cook. Butlers get from $150 to $175 and room, maids $90, and chauffeur $150. In the case there are children, there must be a governess at $150 additional. The regular servants do not do laundry or heavy cleaning and these call for additional expense.

The grocer, the fruiter, the butcher, the dairyman and other food bills in the apartment of the financier mentioned above total nearly $2,000 a month. This isn't extraordinary considering that the servants as well as the family are fed, and course the servants aren't very saving in the kitchen.

In two New York families of great wealth, where the fortune is guarded by trustees, no heir or heiress to any part of the money can be married and receive a check to the estate without a prenuptial agreement signed by both parties. Thus are the family scions protected from show girls "gold-diggers" and "fortune hunters."

With the idea still unadopted by most families, show girls who make a practice of getting rich men's sons drunk and marrying them still have plenty of opportunities. And they continue to take advantage of them, guided and advised by clever lawyers who collect one-half of whatever settlement is made by the family to get rid of the unwelcome daughter-in-law.

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

In the course of an automobile journey across a middle-western state, I was halted by a young man in khaki uniform who informed me that he was under orders to prevent my carrying corn from one county to another lest I spread the ravages of the deadly corn borer. Through I assured him that I had no corn, he insisted on looking under the back seat and making a general search of the car.

This seemed amazing. The only answer could be that he thought I must be interested in secretly spreading damage to farmers' crops. Maybe he suspected me of being in the employ of the corn borer interests. But what motive could I have? The explanation, I think, is simply a silly outcropping of prohibition. We have grown so accustomed to searching boot-leggers for illicit liquor that we are prepared to believe that other contraband goods may secretly be in people's automobiles.

Logical further step would be to ask a stranger for a match and if he says he has none, apply for a search warrant.

How To Overcome Excessive Perspiration of the Feet

A predisposition to excessive perspiration of the feet causes great inconvenience — and frequently a good deal of embarrassment. There are two forms of this disease, depending upon affections more or less serious, and will sometimes be constitutional and other times only temporary. Hyperidrosis is one form, and is merely the excessive perspiration, uncharacterized by an objectionable odor. The other is bromidrosis, and this is by far the most unpleasant, since the perspiration is accompanied by a most penetrating and disagreeable odor.

In both disorders, astringent foot powders are very much in order, but in dealing with one, we must concentrate on deodorizing solutions as well as astringent ones.

Your great-grandmother probably knew the simple relief, which consists of aromatic vinegar and camphor. Her faith in this lotion was fully justified, for there are very few cases in which it will not prove efficacious. This may either be rubbed directly on the feet or added to the bath water. A lotion of extract of walnut leaves with alum and borax in it will also be excellent to use after your nightly foot bath.

Perhaps the simplest form of treatment is to apply a 5 per cent alcoholic solution of formaldehyde.

After the bath and the lotion,

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

God could not be everywhere; therefore He made mothers.—Jewish Proverb.

On my journey from Los Angeles, returning from my vacation, among the interesting people I met were two darling babies (Are babies people?)

The first was Baby Betty, a darling little girl of 11 months. She was brought into the women's retiring room by her young mother, who placed her on the toilet seat. The mother told me that she had begun to train Betty's bowels at about the age of two months, with a little vessel held in her lap; at the age of five months, she began to place her regularly on the vessel for her urination, and now, at the age of 11 months, she was a confirmed dry.

I saw Baby afterwards, asleep on the Pullman seat. It was hot and she had on nothing but her undies, which consisted of a pink Italian silk, low-necked combination which buttoned across the back. Imagine how much more comfortable such a little suit is than heavy nappies.

Betty is an example of what I have been telling you can be done by way of training.

The second baby was Harold, nearing 2 years of age. He sat opposite me at the dining table at lunch, with his mother, and he ate all of the vegetables—including spinach—and other things which his mother placed on his plate with great relish. I noticed he had no milk and I asked his mother about this. She told me that he had been having a quart of milk daily until recently, but when he developed eczema the remember to follow with either an astringent or an absorbent powder.

For perspiration, there is the following formulae:

Glycerine ..... 2 oz.
Perchloride of iron ..... 6 oz.
Essence of bergamot ..... 20 drops

A powder for use after bathing is the following:

Sallie acid ..... 15 grains
Tannic acid ..... 1 dram
Powdered iris root ..... 1 dram
Talcum powder enough to make up

Sallie acid soap may be used on the feet in the bath, and remember the urgency of frequent changes of shoes and stockings. Wash your stockings nightly in a weak solution of boracic acid.

A good "shoe powder" to shake into shoes is:

Permanganate of .....
potassium ..... 13 grains
Sublimate of bismuth ..... 45 grains
Deodorant talcum ..... 60 grains
Sallie acid ..... 2 grains

The following powder, which will be my last, is so pleasant, that I advocate its use, not only against excessive or offensive perspiration, but for the simple pleasure and comfort of it as well.

Sallie acid ..... 1/2 dram
Boric acid ..... 3 drams
Orris root powder ..... 5 drams
Talc ..... 7 1/2 drams
Starch ..... 12 1/2 drams
Tincture of musk ..... 7 drops
Oil of citron ..... 6 drops
Oil of bergamot ..... 6 drops
Oil of orange blossoms ..... 2 drops

Eczema, in both babies and adults, may be due to certain food sensitizations. Frequently it is caused by some food. One doctor found in his cases that in the moist type of eczema the children often have had too much fat, and in the dry type, there was an excess of starchy foods in the diet.

Over-fed and under-fed children are quite prone to have eczema. The over-fat child will be helped by having its food limited, and the under-nourished children must have more food. This sometimes seems to aggravate the eczema at first, but until he is better nourished, the disease will not clear up.

Local irritations can also cause eczema. Picard, in one of the numbers of the Archives of Pediatrics, calls attention to an eczema which comes out in cold weather and clears up during the summer. Sometimes soap, or the secretions of the skin, if allowed to accumulate, will cause it. But we have to believe that there must be a predisposition, perhaps brought on by wrong diet, which also acts in these cases; other wise more children would have it.

Any child suffering from eczema should be taken to a children's specialist, for it may become severe, and in that case it may be rather serious and very difficult to cure.

MENU HINT

Peppers Stuffed with Corn
Baked Potatoes
Pear Salad with Cream Cheese
Salt Wafers Coffee

A package of cream cheese is often a life saver to the busy housewife. Toasted cheese sandwiches have saved many a lunch for which a menu had not been planned. Cheese may be added to "dress up" a salad by grating a little on top. It gives a pleasant finish to the scalloped potato or macaroni dish, and may be used or stuff peppers, tomatoes, celery, cucumbers and fruit for salads.

Today's Recipes.

Corn in Pepper Cases — One pint boiled corn, one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon flour, six or eight sweet green peppers, one cup thin cream or milk, one-half teaspoon salt. Cut from each sufficient cooked corn to measure one pint. Scald the peppers for five minutes, rub off skin, cut off stem end and scrape out seeds. Make cream sauce of remaining ingredients, add corn and fill peppers. Place close together in baking dish and bake in hot oven one-half hour.

Pears with Cream Cheese — Pare and halve ripe pears, core. Stuff hollow with cream cheese and serve on lettuce with French dressing or mayonnaise.

Suggestions.

(Important Trifles.)
Light-colored walls make a room look larger than it is, while dark colors make it appear smaller.

Apply thick applications of soothing ointments. If on the face it must be held on, if necessary, by a little mask and may be necessary to put splints around the elbows so the child cannot scratch.

ISLAND BANS AUTOMOBILES

Sark, in the Atlantic, maintains its ban against automobiles, and the only car to invade the island is still a captive. When the machine was taken to Sark two years ago the 50 inhabitants were greatly excited, for to many it was their first view of an auto. The laws of Sark forbid motors, and a policeman permitted its landing only on condition that it should not be given anywhere on the island. The machine refused to retreat, however, but was towed like a captive to its present resting place in a blacksmith shop, where its engine delightedly supplies the power for the little plant.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — The ultra-dry's strength is in their singleness of purpose.

An ultra-dry is much dryer than an ultra-wet is wet.

Indeed, an ultra-wet is not as wet as even a moderate dry is dry—or any dry, of any degree of dryness.

I never met a wet who was as wet enough to propose compulsory drinking.

Anybody who says a total abstainer denies himself one of the good things of life. I have seen wets tempt others to drink—in fact, urge them to do so—and ridicule them for not doing it—and overdoing it—had influences, out and out.

But I never heard of a wet who advocated anything more drastic than optional individual wetness—by law.

Compulsory total abstinence—since centuries of experience seems to have proved that nothing less will convince the refractory—is the essence of the dry's creed.

He who favors anything weaker than that is no dry—not in this country. Prohibition has other definitions in some other lands. I speak of the United States.

Our dries do not all agree as to enforcement methods and penalties. Such divergences of opinion mark the difference between moderate and ultra-dries, here in America. All do agree on the principle of compulsion. Any dissenter is moist at least.

When a man joins an organization with some specific political object in view, and passes it, I assume that that identifies him as something of an "ultra" in that particular line.

We have two such organizations, on the wet-and-dry proposition, with headquarters here in Washington—

The Anti-Saloon League.

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

The league is out flat-footed for Herbert Hoover for president.

I know, it has been represented as a Republican adjunct. Some say its enthusiasm for Hoover is partly its Republicanism. Maybe, but it would have been for him anyway, as against Al Smith, for anybody who can read knows he is dryer than Al. The league is pretty even, but not in a pronounced case like this.

Say what you will, the league's nerve is middling good.

And the Association Against Prohibition Amendment? That's out for Al?

Here is how the association officials explain it—

The association has Republicans and Democratic members, both—rather more Republicans than Democrats. Whoever side it took a goodly number of its financial supporters would be sore. It must wait until after election—and THEN it can afford to get back into the wet and dry fight. At present it has to straddle—you can see that, what?

You can see why the dries get the majorities they do, too.

DIDN'T RECOGNIZE SPOUSE

The story is being told of one of the country's leading statesmen whose name was put in nomination by a flowery speaker at one of the conventions. The statesman and his wife were listening in on the radio at home. The speaker had been eulogizing him for a half hour giving his life history, the story of his rise and a red-hot description of his candidate and his characteristics.

The statesman's wife, called from the room a moment, returned after the speaker had concluded his speech.

"Luther," she said (we will say that was his name), "who was that man that speaker was describing?"

LOVER THREATENS TO 'END A GIRL WILL NOT MARRY HIM'

Do we ever grow too old to enjoy a bit of melodrama? Lovers threaten to "end it all" if their love is frustrated. Parents tell their children that they'll be sorry "when I'm gone" picturing their cold corpses deaf to all pleadings. The most disconcerting thing with which to meet these heroic moments is banter. Few are proof against good natured raillery.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am almost insane from fear, and I have no one to advise me, but you. I was born in a Spanish speaking country and my mother died before we moved here. Since we came here I have learned English and now I tutor Spanish boys in English. Of my former pupils one brought me a young Spaniard who wants to learn English. He has fallen in love with me and I with him. He is very jealous of my other pupils. My father says, 'You are too young to marry.' I must obey, but this boy I must run away with, so he says. He has written me so, 'Carita, you must with me come, or if you do not I shall kill myself, for then I shall know you love me not. I give you one week from the day you have this letter to come to me.' What shall I do, Mrs. Lee? I must obey, yet I shall die if my lover kills himself. GEORGE-ANN."

"Wondering Glendolla." Don't marry until you are sure you love, especially as your parents don't approve.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am 21 and have been keeping company with a fellow two years. He loves me dearly and has asked me to become his wife. When I am with him I am always glad, but when he is absent my love ceases. At times when I see him talking to other girls I have a feeling of jealousy. Please advise me how I can test my love for him.

"Wondering Peggy." Could you bear the thought of putting him out of your life for ever, Peggy? Could you think of him as the husband of another girl, and could you think of giving him up and going with some one else? If you can answer yes to these questions you do not love him.

LONG NECK—LIFE SAVER!

"Until this moment neither Bob nor I had noticed Cormorant's bill," broke in Mrs. Bobolink. "but now we saw that it was flat and long and had a queer curved point on the end of it and it was covered with little notches."

"So you are a fisherman too," said I. "We have guessed it if you had never said a word about that buoy being a fishing post!"

"How?" cried Captain Cormorant, curiously.

"Why, by your feet, that are webbed, and that beak of yours, that looks so much like our old friend Kingfisher's. But would you mind telling me one thing? How did you get your beak all notched up like that?"

"I didn't get it notched up. I was born with it that way," croaked Captain Cormorant. "Let me tell you, it is easy to catch a fish, but it is another matter trying to hang on to it, and many is the fish that would get away from me if my beak were not so rough that it held it from slipping."

"It was plain to be seen that the fellow didn't mind answering questions. Indeed, he acted as if he really liked to talk about himself, and so I thought I would ask him something else."

But before Mrs. Bobolink had a chance to tell her question her husband interrupted her.

"Yes, and what do you think she asked?" cried he. "I never was so ashamed in my life—such an impertinent question!"

"Say, Captain Cormorant," said she, "what do you do with such a long neck, and why do you twist it about so? I should think you would feel dreadfully uncomfortable with your head so far away from your body most of the time!"

"Cormorant chuckled.

ALL I HAVE TO DO IS TO STRETCH MY NECK UP AS FAR AS IT WILL GO AND OUT POPS MY HEAD ABOVE THE WAVES.

where I am going, and of course I can't see on top of the water when my eyes are underneath it. Then is when my long neck comes in handy.

"All I have to do is to stretch my neck up as far as it will go. Out pops my head above the waves. If I see a sail coming I tell my body to hurry and get out of the way and it does. If I stayed under the surface all the time the boat might creep upon me unaware, and hit me!"

JAMESTOWN EASILY BEATS GERMANTOWN IN SUNDAY CONTEST

Jamestown, after a bad start, easily beat Germantown Sunday 14 to 5.

Germantown started off by chasing in three runs in the first inning on three hits and two errors but was held to two more runs the rest of the game, as Evans pitched better ball and his teammates supported him in fine style.

After the second inning, Jamestown hit the offering of the Germantown pitchers for a total of twenty hits, including five doubles and one triple. Most of the heavy hitting was done in the eighth inning. After Moorman struck out, both Bock and Pickering doubled. Bock singled, Ary tripped, Toland got a walk. Bales was out on a slow roller. Hollingsworth was safe on an error, Evans was out at first. Two more runs were scored in the ninth which brought the total up to 14.

OLD WHIG BANNER IS EXHIBITED HERE

A banner used in the presidential campaign of 1840 by John Sexton, the leader of the Whig party in Greene County, is on display in a case erected on a wall in the corridor of the first floor at the Court House outside the office of County Commissioners.

The banner was donated to Greene County by Hannah and Sarah Sexton, of near Old Town. John Sexton, the Whig party leader, was their father.

Headed with the names "Tom, Tip, Tyler," and the word "Greene," (county), the banner bears the slogan: "We hear one soldier's gallant name, and praise another's living fame. Not alone to honor the man, but to save the Republic."

The case will be enclosed with glass.

XENIA OVERWHELMS DAYTON QUOT TEAM

Displaying one of the startling reversals of form for which it has become noted this season, the Xenia Quoit Club overwhelmed North Dayton 16 to 2 in a Miami Valley Quoit League match on the Xenia quoit Monday night.

This is the most one-sided defeat inflicted by Xenia on a rival league team this year and the victory is believed to have bettered the local league standing.

The National Cash Register Co., of Dayton, one of the league's strongest teams, will appear in Xenia for a match next Monday night.

RESERVES TO PLAY SERIES WITH COPS

Announcement was made Tuesday by Manager Jesse Chambliss that beginning next Sunday, the Reserves will play a three-game series with the Dayton Police baseball team instead of the Eddie Tallors, a colored Springfield nine, as previously announced.

Manager Chambliss learned that the Springfield nine would be unable to open the scheduled series Sunday and for this reason the entire series was called off and the Dayton Police substituted.

FINDS ACCIDENTAL DEATH VERDICT

Dr. F. M. Chambliss, Xenia, county coroner, returned a verdict of accidental death after an inquest into the death of John Mitchell, 39, colored, Dayton, O., who died from a crushed chest and broken legs when struck by an auto on the Xenia-Jamestown Pike, Saturday night.

The inquest was held Monday night with Peter Mitchell, father of the dead man, William Ringer, Clarence Jones, Jacob Sessler and Clarence Ryan, this city, involved in the accident as witnesses.

SCOUT WORK DEMONSTRATION FEATURES PROGRAM ON MONDAY

Greene County Boy Scouts, under the direction of Homer T. Gratz, field executive for the new Trecumseh Area Council, participated in their first annual jamboree in Shawnee Park as a Home-Coming feature Monday afternoon.

Seven events for which prizes are to be awarded the winners, comprised the program, held in an arena roped off adjoining the new auditorium.

Troop No. 45 had a monopoly of the honors awarded for the opening event on the program, the knot tying contest, finishing both first and second. The second team representing this troop, which finished runner-up, does not score, however, as not more than one team under the rules of the contest can receive a prize.

The winning troop was composed of Nisley, Shardt, Pilsen, Mansfield, Cole and Foley. The team finishing second comprised Derrick, Martin, Smith, Friedman, Rockford and Custer.

Two other teams finished ahead of the winning troop but were disqualified when the knots in their ropes came untied and since thoroughness is necessary in this event.

Troop No. 41 won the signallng event with its team composed of Charles Weaver, William Eichman, William Wagner and John Beacham. Troop No. 45, composed of Ellsberry, John Custer, Huston and Suesse, finished second.

In the first aid event, Carl Smith and Richard Stiles, representing Troop 45, took first honors.

With Ralph Baldner and Lester Price, Troop 41's team, finishing second.

In another feature of this event, Troop 41 won first prize. Lester Price, John Beacham and Ralph Baldner composed the winning team.

Price and Beacham also gave Troop 41 first place in the fire arm contest by adjoining the new auditorium.

Troop 23, Springfield, won the archery contest when Ralph Stiers took first place. Robert Crawford of Troop 41, placed second, and Preist, of the Springfield troop, third.

Charles Adair and Minor Monroe, of Troop 43, proved best of the field in the canoe tilting contest. Ralph Baldner and William Wagner of Troop 41 wound up second.

The final event on the program, the canoe bob, was won by Price, of Troop 41, with John Hornick, Troop 43, second, and Baldner, Troop 41, third.

The troop which scored the greatest number of points will be awarded a prize later, it is announced.

A patrol prize will also be awarded and many individual prizes will be given the winners. In many instances the contests were so closely contested that additional prizes may be awarded.

During the jamboree, the Wilmington Boy Scout Band furnished musical entertainment.

Perle L. Whitehead, Dayton Scout Executive, assisted by Dairmple, assistant Dayton Scout Executive; the Rev. Mr. Gilbert and a man named Holliday, both of Dayton, acted as judges for the athletic events.

RED CROSS WORKER SAYS LIFE SAVING SCHOOL IS PLANNED

Fred C. Spaulding, field representative of the American Red Cross, in charge of sixty-six Ohio counties, is spending the three days of the home-coming in Xenia.

Mr. Spaulding says that a program of instruction in first aid and life saving is contemplated by the Red Cross for Greene County, and may be carried out in the next sixty days.

"Any one can be taught in ten minutes how to resuscitate a person by the prone pressure method," said Mr. Spaulding. He said that in countless instances persons are allowed to die because no one available understands resuscitation methods. Persons apparently drowned are often resuscitated by use of the prone pressure method after they have been in the water fifteen or twenty minutes, he said. He said that such methods are superior to use of the pulmotor or any mechanical device for resuscitation.

The Red Cross first aid tent on the grounds of Shawnee Park, has already had several patients. One patient Monday afternoon was a Boy Scout, whose finger was cut almost to the bone by the blow from an axe. Another case attended to Monday was of one of the girl workers on the grounds, whose finger was cut on the jagged edge of a can.

Mrs. Yeola Purdon Elder, executive secretary, and Miss Helen Evers, nurse, are in charge of the tent.

FALSE ALARM

Firemen answered an alarm at 12 o'clock noon Sunday which was more or less a false alarm. Officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad had ordered three wooden box cars, which had outlived their usefulness, intentionally set on fire. The blazing cars attracted attention and resulted in an alarm being turned in.

CLIFTON PREPARES FOR BILLY SUNDAY MEETING AT CHURCH

Elaborate preparations are being made for the appearance of the Rev. W. A. "Billy" Sunday, famous evangelist, on the Home-Coming program at Clifton, O., Wednesday September 5.

His appearance is being sponsored by the Clifton Presbyterian Church. He will make a public address in a big tent at 2 p. m.

No admission will be charged but a collection will be taken to help defray expenses.

Those people expecting to hear the evangelist are asked to come early, bring their baskets and eat a picnic dinner beside the cliffs. Folding chairs should be brought if possible. There will be free auto parking space.

The Rev. William Wilson, pastor of the church, persuaded the Rev. Mr. Sunday to appear for the Home-Coming. The evangelist usually does not fill speaking engagements in smaller communities.

MAKE-UP A Romance of the Footlights

READ THIS FIRST:

Janet Mary James, eighteen, has an ambition to go on the stage because her mother, who died last night she was born, had been famous opera star. In New York Janet meets Ballard Haley, successful young physician who is known as a woman hater. At first it was great run for Janet to have dates with Ballard and leave him about his ideas. Later, Janet knows she loves Ballard, but he keeps her guessing. Mort Goldstein, producer or famous musical shows, sees that Janet has talent and plans to star in a new musical show. Janet, a former mountain parson, reaches Broadway, too, and is holding a sensational revival up town. The newspaper's learn of this, and give Janet a lot of publicity. Goldstein hopes to sign up the parson for a big revival in Madison Square Garden while Janet is starring in the "Blue Laws of 1926," Goldstein's latest revue. In the show is Maxine Griffith, whom Janet helped in the rehearsal days, when the little chorus girl went broke. They became great friends. Janet's arch enemy is Flodine Deslys, who is jealous of Janet's success, and snubs her on every occasion. Janet meets Della De Lacy, a show girl, at a night club. Della invites Janet to come and see her little boy Dennis Reilly. Goldstein's new show opens with Janet as the star.

Janet persuades Ballard to attend the opening night of the new show.

Flodine, in a rage, determines to get even with Janet. She is seen entering Janet's dressing room, during the show, by Lotus Flower, little Chinese maid. After the show Ballard goes around to the stage door to meet Janet. Just as he reaches the door he hears angry voices.

Flodine accuses Janet of taking her diamond ring. It is a pretty cheap trick, and while no one believes Flodine, Janet is afraid of the publicity on account of Ballard.

Ballard tries to persuade Janet to give up her part in the show. He says the notoriety Janet is getting in the show is not good for her. Janet and Ballard have their first serious disagreement. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The Theater

Next in importance to the stars of a motion picture ranks the director. Why? When John and Jane Public go to the theater to see the screening of a production, they usually pick the one showing their favorite star. At least this is the opinion of producers when planning to make a picture. Apparently their theory is right, if box-office returns are to be counted on.

On the other hand, the director is the king of his unit when the picture is being made. His next in importance is the producer, the last of the stars.

The stars turn to him for interpretation of the scenes to be played. The writers turn to him for advice in modeling their scripts. Yet, more than seventy-five per cent of the motion picture-going public never knows who was behind the camera when the picture was being filmed.

Why, then, is he so important? He is supplied with a story, an adaptation, and then a script, or continuity. He has a cameraman to "shoot" the scenes and light his sets. He has players of experience who are supposed to know how to act. Why, then, wouldn't it be easy sailing for anyone with common sense to sit down, follow the script, tell his cameraman to "shoot" and turn out one good picture after another?

Have you ever had the opportunity of examining a continuity? This is a screen story broken down into sequences which are, in turn, broken down into scenes. Every scene necessary to motivate the story is included. The working lines are there. Every bit of action is worked out for every player, from the long "shots".

The writer can sit in his office, write continuity and visualize the

Moreover, although this point is rarely taken into consideration, a director must insist upon making the players natural. Neither he, nor the audience, want "acting." They demand that players go through certain sets of circumstances just as human beings would do if they were encountered by the same. It is up to the director to interpret such actions and see that the actor follows out the ideas. Sincerity is the keynote in the making of a production and this is not to be found in a script. It is up to the man directing.

GREINER REMINISCES

Former Xenian Finds Old Home Town Happy Place To Be After All.

A humorous and instructive picture of the Xenia he knew more than twenty years ago was painted by Russell Greiner, Kansas City, Mo., former Xenian, in an address at the Home-Coming exercises in Shawnee Park auditorium Monday afternoon.

Mr. Greiner, who was the author of a clever little booklet entitled "Seeing Xenia," at the time of the Home-Coming celebration here in 1908, also inspired plans for the present Home-Coming. He presided as chairman of the Monday afternoon program. Following is his talk in full:

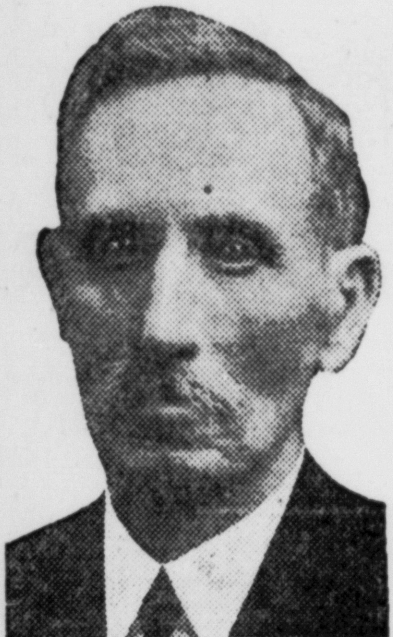

What's in a name?

In traveling over this country if you announce yourself a citizen or a former citizen of Xenia, Ohio you immediately bring forth the remark, tinged with a bit of humor, "Oh, yes, that's the town named after a disease." That places what would be termed in business "a sales value" on the name of this splendid old city. You could be from Newark, Springfield or Urbana and many other cities and in ten minutes they would have forgotten your town or its geographical location, whether in Ohio, New Jersey or Illinois, but from Xenia, always from Xenia, and always from Ohio. I venture to say that at least one hundred men in Kansas City have called me over the telephone in the last few years and said to me—"I passed through Xenia, your old home town, the other day on the Pennsylvania returning from down east and I immediately thought of you and am calling to tell you that Xenia still 'Xenias'." Hundreds of American cities would willingly give real money to have their names as firmly fixed in the minds of thousands of people.

GLORIOUS RELIEF FROM RHEUMATISM THROUGH KONJOLA

This Man Suffered Agonies With Stomach and Kidney Troubles

This surprising medical compound, Konjola, which the Konjola Man is explaining in person to large crowds daily at the Gallaher Drug store, Xenia, has not only become the sensation of this city,

MR. J. M. SNOGRASS

E. Main St.

but is also the talk of the cities and towns throughout this section. For instance, just a few days ago Mr. J. M. Snodgrass, R. F. D. 1, Jamestown, Ohio (near Xenia), made the following statement about Konjola while talking to the Konjola Man.

"Konjola stopped the rheumatism from bothering me and it greatly relieved the stomach and kidney troubles that were part of me for so many years," said Mr. Snodgrass. "I want to endorse this remedy to the public for it surely did the work in my case."

"The stomach trouble I had was the worst affliction I ever heard of. It seemed that as soon as I would eat anything gas would form in the pit of my stomach and rise against my heart and chest. The pressure of this gas was so great that at times I could hardly get my breath. A hot, vile liquid would rise into my mouth and made it burn like fire. This ailment had been with me for five long years and during that time I had done everything I ever heard of for relief, but to no avail. I was terribly constipated, too, and in spite of taking all kinds of laxatives the trouble remained. Then rheumatism set in and I was in agony with that. It seemed to center in my shoulder blades and to spread to all parts of my body. When I would climb the stairs it would take me an hour. I couldn't even raise my arms to comb my hair. Even the weight of clothing hurt me. My kidneys were in an awfully disordered condition and at night when I went to bed I had to rise four or five times due to weakness in my bladder. When I got up the next morning I felt tired and worn out."

"Finally a friend told me about Konjola and how it had helped him and so I finally decided to try it. Almost the very first bottle seemed to help me and as I continued with the treatment I could notice a wonderful improvement all over my body. It seemed to be what my body had always been waiting for and it cleansed my system of all those poisons that had long been there. I kept on taking this medicine until I soon had completed a full treatment. Now, my stomach doesn't bother me at all. I can sit down to the table and eat whatever is placed before me and not suffer one bit. The gas doesn't form any more and now I never did away with the rheumatism and now I haven't an ache or a pain anywhere. I feel fine now and I want to endorse this medicine all that I can."

The Konjola Man is at the Gallaher Drug Store, Xenia, Ohio, where he is daily meeting the public, introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy. Free

Xenia has one outstanding distinction—it never spills the beans of either political party. It's always regular, never embarks on a political crusade, never enlists in a combat to purify affairs either local, state or national, but always votes the ticket, sometimes with a protest at the bitterness of the pill but always votes it straight. Its citizens are like William Allen White says he is—"An independent every day in the year except election day."

Xenia lost considerable of its charm and neighborhood serenity when it paved Main and Detroit Streets and robbed us of the twice a day parade of boys, wading ankle deep in velvety dust, driving home the cows from Roberts pasture. With the coming of paved streets and automobiles much of this neighborhood feeling has passed out. In these good old days everyone knew everyone else, they knew their cow and how much milk she gave and none were too busy to gossip.

Bob Kingsbury, Charlie Jobe, Fred Scheel, Ed Schmidt and Henry Petz knew each of their customers and prospective customers personally. They listened with an attentive ear and real interest to the family gossip of housewives; traded and trafficked with the farmers and when they paid their bills, presented along with the receipt a token of good will in the shape of a sack of candy, a cigar, a pair of suspenders or a necktie. Those were the good old days when the town had many interesting but harmless characters. Back in the old days when Theo Morris sold handkerchiefs out of a grip in front of the Court House and talked against the noise of a Yankee boy hitting machine. On the other end of the public square would be Adam Jackson selling oranges from a wagon at 10c a dozen, the Seldombridge boys with a stock of axe handles and Ned Owens the fish man, displaying his wares on an open cart, Jim Scott selling his ice cream candy and John Winters with his peanut stand, while in undisturbed serenity Lish Manly rested on the Court House steps with his seldom used saw-buck by his side.

Semi-occasionally this Saturday afternoon carnival would be disturbed by Sol Harner and John Clifton, none too gently, dragging one of the Finlaw boys to the calaboose for indulging too freely in lemon extract.

Every Saturday afternoon Hawkins, the horse trainer, contributed to the entertainment by dusting about the streets in a racing sulky drawn by a sleek and shiny black trotter while Bundy, the hack driver, and Pony Sweet paused to admire Hawkins' horse.

In those good old days the 4th of July was a real event, and in such years as it was possible to finance it, it was the gala event of the year. The folks gathered in the county seat from Bellbrook, Bowersville, New Burlington, New Jasper, Cedarville and even from such far distant points as Grape Grove. In those days they came in farm wagons with pa and ma on the front seat and with their progeny and bulging lunch baskets in the back of the wagon on the beds of sweet scented hay, the girls self-conscious in starched dresses and sashes and the boys uncomfortable in shoes and collars.

All sorts of sports were staged for their amusement. At noon in the Court House yards the women folks spread repasts of fried chicken, preserves, pickled eggs and pies and a family's social standing depended on the size of their lunch basket. In the afternoon, groggy and sleepy, from such a feast without exercise, they would gather about the band stand and hear the speakers fight the war and free the negroes while some follower of a radical movement would beg for a chance to free the whites. The closing event of the day would be a band concert in the evening by the Lucas Silver Cornet Band and in later years the Sons of Veterans Band.

How well I recall my first job as a boy in Xenia. It was passing hand bills advertising a shoe store at Hicks' Shoe Store. Homer Hicks, who traveled for many years for a Boston Shoe House, wrote the copy. He always opened with some startling statement and wound up with a prosaic review of their great values in merchandise about to be slaughtered. I would loaf in his impressive presence with the hope he would take me into his confidence and impart some of the knowledge he had acquired by traveling and experience. I secretly nursed the hope that he would recognize my sterling qualities and reveal to me the source of his great wisdom but he never did.

Always in the mind of a man lingers the memories of the old swimming hole. As lads we started with Ten Foot and Sandy Bottom out at Mike Swishers, now desecrated by a golf club. Early in the teens we graduated to the Ford at the river.

How Xenia has changed. No more do the bare foot boys drive the cows back and forth to pasture, no more do dreamy idlers lounge on the steps of the Court House. They have removed the steps. Dairies and pasteurization plants have abolished the family cow. Ice manufacturing plants have done away with the skating ponds. Sanitary swimming pools (the lined have been substituted for Ten Foot and Sandy Bottom. The movies and motor cars have ended the isolation of the farmer and the thrill of the 4th of July has passed out of the country boy's life.

Roberts pasture now contains a Carnegie Library and supervised play grounds. Kline's ice pond is a public park. Swishers farm where we played Indian is now a golf club.

Roberts Villa, one of the great show places, is a Masonic Temple. Theo Morris, the faker, Adam Jackson, the orange man, axe handle Seldombridge and Lish Manly are all dead and gone. All the streets are paved and all the store fronts on Main and Detroit Streets have been replaced with plain dignified styles of up-to-

Up-to-date residences and bungalows have driven out the ornate fret work and elaborate towers. The St. George Hotel has passed into the discard.

The Gazette has linotype machines and a press association franchise.

Chain stores with bright colored fronts abound.

Sidewalk displays of merchandise are passe.

Horse drawn fire apparatus has passed out of the picture.

Shops are Shoppes and Restaurants are Cafes.

The Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs are established institutions.

A city manager form of government reigns at the City Hall.

Theological students no longer grab off all the eligible girls.

The hitching racks that surrounded the Court House square have disappeared.

Torch light parades are no longer a part of political campaigns.

Boys parades of flaming cat-tails soaked in kerosene are a lost art.

Surries and phaetons no longer pass in procession on Main Street.

Bonfires celebrating political victories have ceased to blaze and belch forth black smoke at the intersection of Detroit and Main Streets.

Horse shoeing shops have been supplanted with filling stations.

Green street has lost the post office but gained the movie house.

Wooden awnings across the entire sidewalk have given way to the flapping canvas.

Grocery store candy, the greatest of children's delicacies is but a memory.

Cigarette stubs now litter the sidewalks where the stubs of Wrights Havanas once held sway.

Livery stables are now garages. Fifers, Richardsons and Kyles Livery stables are but a memory.

How many of you can remember Leon Snively's doggeral on the sign that appeared over the entrance to Kyles Livery Stable—

"Whip light and drive slow and pay your bill before you go?"

Previous to the home-coming of August 1908, I wrote a little book "Seeing Xenia with Home-comers" and in that book I referred to thirty-eight citizens in Xenia and in the twenty years that have elapsed nineteen of these men are not here to greet us as they have passed to the great beyond, but we tenderly cherish their memories however humble their contribution to the history of the old town.

Like every city of its size Xenia has had dreams of industrial greatness. At times when the town seethed with excitement and rumors the old timers, known as anti-progressives and moss-backs, retreated to their prayer closets and communed with the Lord. They emerged with a revelation which enraged the town boosters but their prayers were answered and the community's welfare and morals were preserved from the evils that would be washed in on the tide of industrial progress.

The boosters' vision of factories with beaming smoke stacks and five story buildings were but a dream and Xenia has continued on in the even tenor of its ways, a beautiful homelike refined residence city, an ideal place in which to live.

Brick, stone and mortar are not the Xenia of my boyhood memory. It's the kindly faces of the good people that shine like a beacon across the sea of memory, many of whom have long since been swept out into the unknown.

CHIEF TAKES RIDE ON RUN-AWAY CYCLE

Police Chief M. E. Graham took an unscheduled ride in a motorcycle side car which had its serious as well as humorous aspects for a time during the Home-Coming parade in the business district Monday night.

Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, was leading the parade, clearing traffic on Detroit St., for the marchers, with Chief Graham riding in the side car.

Reaching Main and Detroit Sts., the traffic officer stopped the cycle, but left the motor running, while he got out to adjust the automatic flash signal device at the intersection.

Suddenly in some unexplainable manner, the machine jumped in gear and shot forward at about thirty miles an hour. It zig-zagged in a crazy manner for about twenty five feet and Chief Graham, concluding there was need for instant action of some kind, grabbed the handle-bars and steered the cycle into the curb.

The motorcycle crashed into a parked auto, tearing off the running board and slightly damaging the motorcycle. Chief Graham was unhurt.

The auto was owned by C. F. Williamson, Albany, Indiana, former Xenian, who laughingly bewailed the fact he had motored all the way back to his old home town only to be run into by the police chief.

LUNCHEON GUEST

PARIS, Aug. 28.—Frank B. Kellogg, American secretary of state, who came here to sign the treaty for the abolition of war, was guest of honor today at a luncheon given by President Doumergue, of France at his summer home in Rambouillet. Secretary Kellogg was accompanied to Rambouillet by Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador.

THOUSANDS GATHER FOR FIRST PARADE; AFFAIR IS SUCCESS

The Wilmington Boy Scout Band was awarded first prize for band entrants with the O. S. and S. O. Home Cadet Band taking second prize of $10.

Delta Theta Tau Sorority won a prize of $10 for appearance. The sorority was the only organization to have a decorated float in the parade. The auto bearing members of the sorority was decorated with crepe paper of many colors.

Motorcycle policemen followed by L. S. Barnes as grand marshal and members of the police department headed the procession. Next in line came Daytona Council, No. 8, D. of A., with a women's seventeen-piece band and seventy-eight marchers, followed by the Wilmington thirty-six-piece Boy Scout band and forty Greene County Boy Scouts.

Trailing the Scouts were the Evening Star, D. of A., Osborn, with thirty-six marchers, the O. S. and S. O. Home cadet band of forty pieces; Phoenix Rebekah Lodge, No. 74, I. O. O. F. with a twenty-one piece band and seventeen marchers; the nineteen piece girls' band of the Springfield I. O. O. F. Home; the Montgomery County I. O. O. F. Band; Clinton Council, No. 32, Wilmington; the Pride of Xenia and Obedient Councils, D. of A., Xenia Lodge, No. 32, I. O. O. F. with 144 marchers; the Delta Theta Tau Sorority float, the Edna Wolf life insurance float, Company L's army truck and the new fire truck.

The parade formed at Main and Collier Sts., moved west on Main St., past the reviewing stand in front of the south entrance to the Court House to West St., south on West St. to Second St.; east on Second to Detroit St.; north on Detroit to Church St., and then along Detroit Blvd. to Shawnee Park where it disbanded.

A committee of three judges awarded the parade prizes. Notables in the reviewing stand included leading Home-Coming officials, Russell Greiner, Kansas City, Mo., and former Mayor William F. Brennan, now a deputy prohibition administrator.

those principles and live them."

Making a strong appeal for law enforcement, Dr. McChesney asserted that the "law is strong and practically every law is founded on firm principles of justice." He advocated inflicting the full penalty of the law on all criminals regardless of outside conditions.

Turning to the subject of liberty and freedom, the speaker warned that it takes eternal vigilance to maintain liberty.

"Let us support our public schools. Let us not criticize—that is destructive. Give a constructive emphasis to the schools and stand by your teachers."

Closing his address, Dr. McChes-

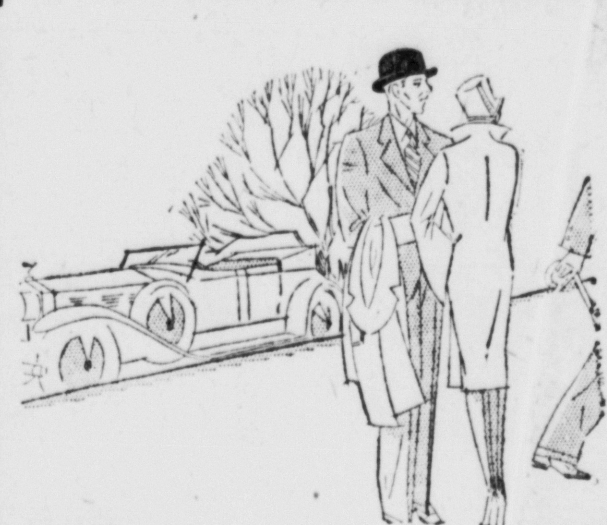

ney declared that "If Kellogg has his way, the war drum will no longer throb, battle flags will be furled and there will be peace around the world."

The afternoon program was held in connection with the observance of the second day of the Home-Coming as "School and Lodge Day."

Russell Greiner, Kansas City, Mo., former Xenian, acted as chairman of the exercises and introduced Dr. McChesney. Mr. Greiner was originally introduced as the presiding officer by Mayor John W. Prugh, who also gave a welcome to former residents on behalf of the city.

In his welcoming speech, Mayor Prugh pointed with pride to the progress made by Xenia in the last twenty years and enumerated several of the principal changes that have taken place.

Musical entertainment was furnished by the Bath Twp. Consolidated School Orchestra. Following Dr. McChesney's address, the program closed with the Rev. H. B. McElree delivering the benediction.

The Dividend Cuts the Cost - but the Quality Remains Highest and Best

THE first endeavor of The Central is to provide the best protection that insurance experience can devise—and that should likewise be the first consideration of the policy-holder at all times. With quality of protection assured, the second consideration is cost. Central has reduced cost and, at the same time, has given even greater protection to its policy-holders by accepting only preferred risks. Where there is an excessive fire hazard, we do not accept the risk. By careful inspection and approval of risks, we have kept our loss expense low. Similar attention to management has kept operating expense at a minimum. Since in a mutual company, the earnings belong to the policy-holders, this has resulted in a substantial dividend to policy-holders—effecting a distinct
